President Announces He Will Outline Treasury Needs Monday.

Plans Will Follow, Harrison Asserts

Conferees Silent as They Depart; Bonus, Farm Funds Needed.

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt last night placed up to members of Congress the problem of working out an adequate tax program to take care of the fiscal needs of the Government, and balance the "ordinary" budget in 1937, but declined to submit figures or discuss the range of the program.

The President will send a message to Congress on Monday, outlining Treasury needs, but submitting no tax plan for their guidance, he told a delegation of Congressional Democratic leaders and Administration fiscal experts at a White House conference last night.

"The President will outline the needs and Congress will work out its own bill," Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, spokesman for the Congressional group, told reporters.

For more than three hours leaders sat around a conference table with President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, and discussed methods of procedure and the urgent necessity for financing the fast mounting public debt.

President's Ideas in Doubt.

When they filed out of the White House doorway on the stroke of midnight, however, none of the conferees knew specifically what was in the President's mind, either as to the range of the program, or the methods he favors for raising the revenue, it was learned on reliable authority.

Senator Harrison told newspapermen that the plan contemplated calls for financing the $500,000,000 farm "soil conservation" bill finally approved by Congress yesterday, and at least partially amortizing the $2,000,000,000 soldiers' bonus passed early in the session, but steadfastly refused to discuss "details."

"We had a very full discussion of the whole financial condition of the Government," Senator Harrison told reporters. "The President informed the conference he would send to Congress next week a message as to the necessities of the Government for further money and suggestions for balancing the budget in 1937."

Won't Ask Bonus Cost.

In one authoritative quarter it was made clear the President has no intention of asking Congress to provide for the full $2,000,000,000 bonus cost, or to make any sizebale tax provisions for the projected $2,000,000,000 in relife costs.

Figure were not discussed, conferees said. Democratic leaders agreed to return to the Capitol and carefully study the situation. They left the White House with the impression that the House Ways and Means Committee, and later the Senate Finance Committee, will propose any taxes they see fit, with a view of course to the range of levies Congress is willing to accept.

Neither the Treasury nor the President will submit any tax bill to Congress, either in a fixed form, or in the form of alternative proposals, leaders were assured. It was pointed out that it has not been the practice of the Treasury in past revenue legislation, to submit hard and fas proposals.

Republican Protest Expected.

This is expected to bring forth the immediate condemnation of Republican leaders in Congress, who have repeatedly insisted it is the duty of the Treasury to submit tax programs for the guidance of Congress, as had been the custom in Republican Administrations.

Although Treasury experts were present at the conference, many of whom have explored the whole tax field and made detailed studies, they did not submit their plans. Secretary Morgenthau probably will be called before both Congressional committees to express his views, it was indicated.

President Roosevelt told the leaders that he wishes to go over the fiscal situation carefully during the next three days before drafting his message on just how much the Government will need in new revenues to safely carry its burdensome load of expenditures.

Senator Harrison informed newspapermen that although he could not say how broad a tax range the President believes is necessary, it would be sufficient to restore the revenue structure to the proportion it bore to expenditures prior to invalidation of AAA processing taxes by the Supreme Court and passage of the bonus.

Fishing Boat Disabled; Coast Guard Aid Sent

New York, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The steam trawler Sea of the Bay State Fishing Co., of Boston, notified the Coast Guard tonight that she was totally disabled, due to boiler trouble, at a point about 200 miles east of Boston Lightship.

The Coast Guard cutter Algonquin was sent from Woods Hole, Mass., to tow the disabled craft to Boston. Eleven men are aboard the Sea.

Farm Aid Bill at White House For Enactment by President

Measure Creating New Half-Billion Dollar Program to Replace Defunct AAA Is Approved Finally by House and Senate.

Erecting a new $500,000,000 farm adjustment program on the invalidated ruins of AAA, House and Senate yesterday without a record vote approved the conference report on the measure, with its stated "soil conservation" policy, and sent it to the White House for signature.

One lone voice, that of Senator William E. Borah, Idaho, was raised against the "omnipotent" powers conferred on the Secretary of Agriculture to re-establish and maintain the pre-war ratio between the purchasing power of farm and non-farm income.

Marked by reiterated doubts of members as to its constitutionality, the measure nevertheless passed House and Senate in different forms, and variations were ironed out in conference.

Spurred on by urgent pleas by AAA chieftains that planting already is starting in many Southern States, action was unduly expedited. Agriculture Department officials have called regional conferences for next week to go over details of planning.

Briefly, the bill provides for dual programs, the first, a stop-gap arrangement, giving the secretary power to pay benefits to farmers for taking land out of production for "soil conservation," and the second, to go into effect in 1938, providing for State administered programs, aided by Federal grants. Before 1938, States could come in with their own AAA plans, if approved by the secretary.

Senator Borah, in his attack yesterday on the so-called McCormack amendment, ostensibly aimed at protecting the city consumer against exhorbitant food prices, said:

"There are no statistics and there are no facts which would enable

Treasury to Ask $800,000,000 In Cash Monday

$1,809,000,000 Total to Bring U. S. Debt to All-Time Peak.

One of the largest borrowings of new money in the history of the United States Treasury, involving $800,000,000 new cash in the total March 15 Treasury financing, which in its aggregate $1,309,000,000, was announced by Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday.

The amount of new borrowing shoots the public debt to another new all-time high for the United States. From its present peak level of $30,500,000,000 it will rise to $31,850,000,000, but as the April 15 maturities are retired, the figure will drop until it reaches $31,300,000,000 on April 15. The top figure is reached by reason of the March 15 program to borrow $559,000,000 to retire the same amount of maturities on April 15.

The Treasury will ask $1,250,000,000 of the $1,809,000,000 in cash. From this will come the $800,000,000 of new money and $450,000,000 to pay off that amount in bills maturing March 15, in cash.

On notes due April 15, the Treasury will undertake refunding operations totaling $559,000,000.

Causes Surprise.

The extent of this borrowing for March caused considerable surprise in financial circles. The cash-on-hand policy of the Treasury has usually maintained that balance at around the figure of $700,000,000. However, the huge cash borrowings in December, during which $950,000,000 of new money was secured, had set the cash-on-hand balance at the high figure of neary $1,000,000,000. Even this figure does not include approximately $400,000,000 which has been reserved to retire national bank notes. The expected increased returns from March income taxes are expected to swell it further.

One reason considered sound in some quarters was that the Treasury was seizing the chance presented by the present favorable money market to clear the way for later borrowings to be necessitated by the soldiers' bonus, to be paid beginning June 15. Thus the Treasury, studying future needs, is piling up funds with which to meet them.

Possibly in connection with this, the Secretary said yesterday:

"We are getting our house in order to handle the bonus as expeditiously as possible." Other than this he would not comment on the bonus financing necessary in the next few months.

Terms Unrevealed.

Secretary Morgenthau did not indicate what the exact character and terms of the new securities will be. This announcement is expected by Monday.

The $450,000,000 sought on March 15 to meet securities then due, will consist of nine issues of Treasury bills brought out at intervals since last autumn. The Undersecretary of the Treasury, at that time Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, stated then that he was deliberately piling up March 15 maturities in order that short-term borrowing could then be converted into long-term paper.

Holders of the bills will be paid in cash, and not by trading bonds for bills. These latter bills bear no conversion privileges, as the cash comes in from the sale of the new issues.

Priest Held by Bandits Is Reported Still Alive

Mukden, Manchukuo, Feb. 27 (AP). Peasants reported to military officers today that they had seen the Rev. Father Clarence Joseph Burns, of Ossining, N. Y., alive in the hands of bandits February 23.

They said at that time the American priest was at Naotoukuo, 43 miles southeast of Tundhua.

Taft to Oppose Senator Borah For Ohio Votes

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 27.—Ohio organization Republicans pitted a "favorite son" Presidential candidate today against Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, for control of the State's 52 delegates to the national convention.

Robert A. Taft, of Cincinnati, son of the late President William Howard Taft, was chosen by the State central committee as the organization's Presidential candidate, to whom its slate of delegate candidates will pledge their first choice.

Charles R. Frederickson, of Coshocton, was selected as a second "favorite-son" candidate to whom delegate candidates will pledge their second choice. He is a former State chairman and a former president of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association.

The committee's action came after four other possible candidates informed State Chairman Ed D. Schorr they would not enter the State primary. They were Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa; Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher; Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan.

Borah Slate Announced.

Borah has announced his intention of bidding for Ohio's delegates.

Senator Borah's backers immediately announced his complete slate of delegate and alternate candidates at large, headed by John S. Knight, Akron newspaper editor.

The Senator's delegate candidates will pledge their second choice to Frank E. Gannett, of Rochester, N. Y., publisher of newspapers in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Illinois.

Although the organization slate of delegates will be nominally pladged to Taft and Frederickson, for practical purposes, they will be unpledged, and will be free to support any candidate at the Cleveland convention.

Gov. Landon's refusal was made in spite of a State-wide poll of approximately 10,000 Republicans

Franco-Soviet Pact Arouses Europe's Fear

Nazis May Void Locarno Treaty, Arm Rhine Neutral Zone.

Italian-German Alliance Is Hinted to Offset Pending Accord.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Feb. 27.—Ratification of the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance treaty by the French Chamber of Deputies tonight was considered here an offensive move against Germany.

The German government recently declared the pact incompatible with the Locarno Treaty. Germany's decision whether to invoke this legal argument as justification for re-occupying the demilitarized Rhineland zone and fortifying her western frontier against France has all the chancellories of Europe worried.

German observers pointed out that France, besides doing a great disservice for European civilization by ratifying the pact, also jeopardized her own vital interests. It was predicted generally that ratification will herald tremendous growth of communism in France.

Rome Surprised.

Rome, Feb. 27 (AP).—Surprised by the action of the French Chamber of Deputies in ratifying the Franco-Soviet mutual aid pact, informed Italian circles tonight predicted Italy and Germany would be drawn by common necessity to revise their positions on the Locarno today.

The prediction included a declaration that Italo-German denunciation of the treaty assuring mutual security in Europe would be the inevitable conclusion of the French course.

These informed sources said they had expected Japanese developments to slow up French ratification and should Senate approval follow the chamber's affirmative vote today, both the Italian and German views would have to be modified.

Receives Chambrun.

Premier Mussolini received Count Charles de Chambrun, French Ambassador to Italy, and diplomatic circles presumed the Premier communicated Italy's Locarno views.

The war minister in a budget message to the Italian Chamber of Deputies said the East African campaign had not weakened in the least Italy's fighting power in Europe.

He pointed out that as fast as units had gone to East Africa others had replaced them and war preparations had continued with increased fervor. The Italian dictator gave Great Britain, France and Belgium another warning today that Italy might withdraw as a guarantor of the Locarno treaty if war sanctions against the Fascist nation were extended.

The Premier's newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, in a strong editorial, said: "As a guarantor of the equilibrium of the Rhine and Danube, Italy sees organized against her those very powers which have benefited by her guarantees."

Soviet Pact Ratified.

Paris, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact, strongest link in the military chain being forged around Nazi Germany, was ratified 353 to 164 by the chamber of deputies tonight.

The treaty provides for immediate mutual military assistance in case of an unprovoked attack upon the European territory of either power. Each nation reserves the right to determine whether the attack was unprovoked.

Two main provisions of the treaty, however, are:

1. Assistance only within the framework of the League of Nations Covenant.

2. Conformity with the Locarno treaty, in which France, Britain, Germany, Belgium and Italy mutually guarantee the peace of western Europe.

The treaty makes Russia and France the pillars of a defensive union including Rumania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Turkey, Bulgaria and Greece. All together, these states are capable of mobolizing 30,000,000 soldiers and 8,000 fighting planes.

D. C. Health Funds Plea Filed; Budget Bureau Plans Hearing

The Bureau of the Budget yesterday took over the pivotal role in the District-wide campaign, now under way, for increased public health appropriations.

Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget, received from the District Commissioners the petition presented to the latter Tuesday by the Ruffin committee. The petition, protesting the need for additional health and hospital funds, was accompanied by a letter signed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, in which he requests the Budget Bureau to receive the committee in person.

That the desired audience will be accorded the protest committee, headed by Dr. Sterling Ruffin, president of the District Medical Society, was assured late yesterday by an official spokesman for the Bureau of the Budget.

Requesting that his name be withheld, he said: "The bureau has never refused a hearing to District citizens interested in appropriations affecting their own welfare. It won't begin now."

It is in the bureau's power to restore all or any part of the $199,000 it eliminated from public health and municipal hospital estimates previously approved by the Commissioners. Congress, of course, can effect the same result if it choose, but favorable action by the Budget Bureau would virtually seal the victory of the health drive.

Commissioner Hazen's letter to Mr. Bell follows:

"Complying with the request of a committee composed of representatives of certain local organizations, the names of which are set forth in the accompanying petition, addressed to the Commissioners, the Commissioners granted a hearing to this committee on yesterday, the 25th instant. At the conclusion of the hearing the committee filed with the Commissioners the petition referred to, which the Commissioners agreed to forward to the Budget Bureau for its consideration.

"It will be noted that the purpose of this petition is to obtain the approval of the Budget Bureau of the submission to Congress of estimates of appropriations for the Health Department and hospitals under the Board of Public Welfare in an amount equal to the recommendations made by the Commissioners to the Budget Bureau for these several services for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937.

"In accordance with the unanimous and urgent request of the committee, the Commissioners agreed in transmitting the petition to the Budget Bureau to indicate

500 Millions U. S. Housing Plan Advanced

Felix Bruner's Series on Castles in the Air—Page 4.

A housing program, involving establishment of a new Government housing authority, Government subsidies, and a two-year appropriation of $500,000,000, was adopted yesterday at a conference attended by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York; Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and representatives of organized labor.

Announcement of the program, which was originated by the Labor Housing Committee, said that it had the approval of both Wagner and Ellenbogen and that it would be presented to President Roosevelt for his consideration. Wagner said he will introduce a bill in the Senate next week.

Embraced in Program.

The program includes establishment of a permanent Government housing authority, set up in corporate form, with a three or five man board on which both labor and consumers will be represented. The authority would have control over all large-scale low-rent housing, thus eliminating other Government agencies engaged in the actual building of houses.

The board would be empowered not only to engage in slum clearance, but to assist in building houses on vacant property.

The statement announcing the plan declared that houses should not be built on the "part-time industry" or subsistence homestead community basis.

Low-Income Families.

"The National Public Housing Authority should work through local public housing authorities and co-operative or other nonprofit privates agencies representing labor or consumers," the statement said. "Such local agencies should, wherever and whenever possible, initiate, construct, own and manage housing projects."

The meeting at which the program was adopted was attended, in addition to Wagner and Ellenbogen, by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Reuben T. Wood and Edward W. Curley and Miss Catherine Bauer, representing the National Housing Conference. M. J. McDonough, of the building trades division of the Federation of Labor, presided.

The group said that the housing problem involved the building of

Capital Unaware of Army Uprising as Extremists Act Swiftly; Saito's Wife Shot Trying to Defend Husband; 4 Captains Face Trial.

By Ray G. Marshall.

World Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Tokyo (Friday), Feb. 28.—It is 7:03 o'clock Friday morning and for the first time I am able to tell how 900 Japanese soldiers rebelled and killed two cabinet officers and three high officials of the court and army.

With incredible precision, they moved on what to them was a sacred crusade, and before anyone in Japan knew what was happening, they had gained their ends.

Led by four army captains—who commanded 900 troops—the fanatics used swords, pistols and machine guns.

In some cases, only pistols were used.

Some victims fell before sword thrusts.

Machine-Gunned House.

Once, the soldiers machine-gunned the flimsy homes of their victims—then went inside to finish the job.

No arrests have yet been made. It is expected that some time today the officers will submit to arrest and trial—or take the gentleman's way out.

That is hara-kari—suicide by disemboweling in the traditional Japanese manner—stipulated by the code of the Samurai.

At 7 a. m. it was announced that the officers either would submit within an hour or take their own lives. This, however, they failed to do, and at 8:30 a. m. it was announced the rebels had "overslept" in their quarters at the Sanno Hotel, near the United States embassy, and had decided to have breakfast in the nearby Koraku restaurant before talking further with their superiors.

There will be days of deliberation before the complexion of the new government will be determined.

Those mentioned include Gen. Ugaki, former governor general of Korea; Gen. Araki, former minister of war, and Prince Kanoye.

Before effecting the compromise by which the 900 followers of the assassins were allowed to return to their barracks, the rebels demanded and obtained assurances that their policies will have a place in the national policy agreed upon by the new government.

No Change in Form.

This is certain:

There will be no change in the form of Japan's government.

But there will, unquestionably, be a change in its policies in recognition of the demands of the men who killed Okada, Takahashi, Saito, Suzuki and Watanabe.

The execution of the plot was the quietest thing ever known in Japan.

Snow was falling softly when the murders occurred.

Not a single name of the enlisted men who participated in the killings has been revealed.

They are referred to simply as members of the "squads of Wednesday morning."

At the time, and even long after-

Selassie Calls Doctor, Is Hurt or Ill, Is Rumor

Rome (Friday), Feb. 28 (AP).—Rumors that Emperor Haile Selassie was sick or wounded circulated here today following receipt of Italian dispatches from Djibouti, French Somaliland, that the Ethiopian ruler's Swedish physician had suddenly been summoned to Dessye, near where the Negus was understood to have his headquarters.

HagoodFriends Fail to Modify Army's Rebuke

General Quits Post as 8th Corps Area Head; Fight Continues.

By the Associated Press.

Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood formally relinquished command of the Eighth Corps Area and the Third Army at San Antonio, Tex., yesterday as congressional friends here failed in an effort to have his "punishment" set aside or modified.

These actions stood out as the storm continued to blow on Capitol Hill over the disciplining of Hagood.

Hagood yesterday telegraphed Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, that in accordance with orders he had just received by mail he had turned command of the area and Army over to Maj. Gen. Henry W. Buttner, commanding officer of Fort Sill, Okla., and next ranking senior general officer in the area.

Allowed to Remain.

At the same time Hagood requested—and was granted—permission to remain in San Antonio one month to settle his private affairs and make his final reports as commanding general. Under the original orders Hagood was ordered to his home in Columbia, S. C., to await further instructions.

Defending the War Department's action, Representative Harter (Democrat), Ohio, called the attention of the House to the mutiny in which Japanese officers and men assassinated the premier and other statesmen in a coup d'etat. This, he said, was an example of why Army officers should stay out of politics in a House speech.

"The Army has never been in politics in this country," he declared, "and I am hopeful it never will. The danger of an army in politics is exemplified by the military cliques which in Japan, only a few days ago, and in other parts of the Far East, Greece and South America in the past, have seized or attempted to seize control of the government."

Talks to President.

Meanwhile, Senator Byrnes, from Hagood's home State of South Carolina, conferred with President Roosevelt at the White House late yesterday, but declined to tell newspapermen the purpose of his visit.

Senator Metcalf (Republican), of Rhode Island, refused to accept the War Department's assumption of full responsibility for the disciplinary action taken against Hagood, made in an official statement Government Is Reported Ready to Use Force Against Insurgents.

Deadline Ignored; Buildings Occupied

Ministers Summoned to Palace; Official Area Circled by Troops.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Friday) Feb. 28.—Rebellious Japanese soldiers, said dispatches from Tokyo today, refused to evacuate buildings which they seized Wednesday, despite their previous agreement to return to their barracks at 8 a. m.

Japanese authorities, it was reported, were considering measures to force them out of their positions.

A Japanese embassy spokesman here, confirming the report that the mutineers held their places after the deadline, stated it was certain that the Japanese army's high command "will not accept insubordination."

Ready to Apply Force.

He declared the army would "apply force," if the rebels continued to refuse to evacuate.

Tokyo dispatches declared authorities directing the application of martial law in the city had cleared traffic around Hibiya Park, which contains many government buildings.

This area directly faces the Imperial Palace. The imperial Hotel, the center of foreign activities in Tokyo, also is adjacent to the section.

Rebels were said to be holding the official residence of the premier and other government properties in the heart of the city.

Minister in Hurried Parley.

It was understood the ministers of the cabinet of Acting Premier Fumio Goto again hurried to the palace for an emergency meeting this morning.

Six ministers who left the palace at 2 a. m., apparently believing that the situation was improved, were said to have returned hurriedly.

Goto and three other members of the cabinet were reported to be remaining inside the palace as a precautionary measure.

Admiral Mineo Osumi, minister of the Navy, was understood to have convened an emergency conference of naval authorities.

Insurgents 'Stand Pat.'

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—A Domei Press Association wireless dispatch to the Rafu Shimpo (Los Angeles Japanese Daily News) said tonight a new crisis was precipitated in Tokyo when the deadline of 8 a. m. February 28 (Tokyo time) came with no indication of a withdrawal of insurgent troops from government buildings.

The Japanese navy, the dispatch said, took the situation in hand by landing marines and stopping all traffic around the Hibiya Park, which adjoins the navy ministry and the justice ministry.

Admiral Osumi, navy minister, rushed to the navy office, the dispatch said, to go into secret conference with Vice Minister Hasegawa and his staff.

It had appeared earlier that the crisis created by the assassination of four government leaders was over when the revolting soldiers had agreed to return to their barracks.

New Telephone Ban.

San Francisco, Feb. 27 (AP).—A second ban was placed tonight on private telephone calls between here and Tokyo.

An attempt to place a call from the Associated Press here to its bureau in Tokyo brought the response that "only government calls are being accepted until further notice" from the transpacific operator.

This information came on the heels of London reports that censorship again had been established in the Japanese capital, tensely awaiting developments in a military uprising.

The same ban on private telephone calls was established in Tokyo, where all communication is under government control, two days ago when the disturbance started.

It was about 2 p. m. Friday, Tokyo

Roper Charged With Prejudice By Ousted Aid

Jones Quits After Being Discharged; Resignation Is Accepted.

By Felix Bruner.

Explaining that his "insubordination" grew out of his loyalty to his chief, Commander H. McCoy Jones, one of the two officials of the Bureau of Navigation of the Department of Commerce, who, Secretary Roper announced yesterday had been discharged, effective February 29, resigned yesterday. His resignation was accepted "without prejudice."

Jones and Frederick L. Adams were given notice of their discharge after they had refused to answer questions of Secret Service investigators concerning alleged news "leaks" from the bureau. They were questioned in the absence of Joseph B. Weaver, head of the bureau, and refused to answer the questions until Weaver returned.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Johnson, in discussing the situation at a press conference Wednesday, said the pair had been discharged for "violent and explosive insubordination." Adams was out of the city yesterday and apparently had not submitted a resignation. Jones' resignation was effective immediately.

Following his resignation, Jones said that "the Secretary of Commerce has made no effort to hear my side of the story nor has anyone connected with the administration of the Department of Commerce."

Charges Prejudice.

"It can only be said," Jones continued, "that he assumed the responsibility of passing judgment in a matter in which he was decidedly prejudiced and that he handed down the maximum sentence without even attempting to prove the charge or to hear both sides of the case."

Jones made public inter-departmental correspondence showing that on February 11 he had been suspended, that he had been almost immediately reinstated, and that subsequently he had been discharged. Despite the discharge, he still later was permitted to resign and his resignation accepted "without prejudice."

The commander said that the charge that he had deliberately refused to answer questions was untrue, but that he had asked that the questioning be postponed until the return of Weaver to Washington.

While department officials insisted that the only charge against Jones and Adams was their refusal to answer questions, Jones said that Malcolm Kerlin, executive assistant to Roper "has stated publicly that the real charge against me was that I released or made public a resolution of the Board of Supervising Inspectors through the National Committee on Safety at Sea, which resolution stressed the fact that, because of inadequate personnel, the work of the several inspection districts was so far behind as to endanger safety at sea."

Jones said publication of his document "distressed" some Commerce Department officials, but he denied responsibility for its publication.

"While I feel that the public ought to know that the inspectors themselves consider the situation alarming," Jones continued, "I do not feel that it would be fitting for me to release such a report without the approval of my superiors, and I did not do so."

Jones said he was "ready to be sacrificed in order to see that the public is adequately protected." He then quoted Weaver as having said on February 17 that he took the responsibility for the "ill-advised and premature" publication of the report.

Makes Letter Public.

Jones made public a letter, dated February 11, and signed by Ernest G. Draper, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, telling him he was suspended and giving him 24 hours to show cause why he should not be "dismissed or otherwise disciplined." Draper set out specified charges of insubordination, covering Jones' refusal to answer questions.

Two days later, Draper wrote to Jones telling him that he had been given until noon of February 17 to answer the charges. The letter said Jones had requested the extension. On February 17 Jones wrote to Draper questioning the authority of the investigators and declaring he felt an investigation of the affairs of the bureau in the absence of Weaver was unfair. He requested that the charge of insubordination be dismissed.

Irony in Description of Hagood as Wise-Cracker; New Deal Epithets; Farley Smiles Again.

By Franklyn Waltman

As ironical as anything that has happened around Washington recently is that an Administration as addicted to "wise-cracking" as the Roosevelt regime should justify its cashiering of an outstanding Army officer, Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, on that score. The wise-crack has been the piece de resistance of this Administration.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins have been the chief wise-crackers of the Administration, taking refuge behind that style of retort whenever they are confronted with embarrassing facts.

Hugh S. Johnson when he presided over NRA perhaps was the most polished and apt of the New Deal wise-crackers. He set the pace for other worthies. As he landed day after day on page one with his wise-cracks, his envious brethren in other emergency agencies commenced imitations of him. And, of course, the wise-crack as a form of repartee is not unknown at the White House.

Critics of the New Deal have had their valid complaints turned aside with such charges as that they were "intellectual termites" or "political gadflies" or that they suffered from "halitosis of the intellect"—if they had not already run into Harry Hopkins' less elegant description of being "too damned dumb." Such wise-cracks have been regarded from within the Admistration as quite proper. But then they were directed at critics of the New Deal. It seems that the wise-crack is proscribed only when it is used against the New Deal.

In Gen. Hagood's case the Chief of Staff describes the suspended officer as one "of high professional and technical attainment, of brilliant intellect and great energy," but he is likewise termed "flippant"—which some had come to believe was a virtue in this Administration—and his remarks before the House Appropriations sub-committee were described as "of the 'wise-crack' political type which every Army officer—and most assuredly one of such high rank—should sedulously avoid in his public utterances." Would Gen. Hagood have been ordered home to await orders had he turned his wise-cracks against the critics of the New Deal?

Whatever one might think of James Aloysius Farley, he must be admired for his straightforward, engaging optimism. He has the faith of a child. Abandoning his scowls of recent weeks, he became "Smiling Jim" again at a press conference yesterday. Happiness radiated from him and his optimism almost became contagious.

How about the California situation? he was asked. Oh, that will be settled to the President's advantage, he replied. How about the insurgency of former Gov. William A. Comstock in Michigan? Oh, Comstock will be for the President when the time comes, was the reply. Weren't Massachusetts Democrats in a cat-and-dog fight? Oh, that situation will shape up all right. New York? Nothing to it—the Republicans are in much worse shape than the Democrats.

There was not a muddled Democratic political situation mentioned which "Smiling Jim" did not think would be settled satisfactorily in time. Well, asked the cynical reporters, could the Democratic National Committee chairman think of any States that Mr. Roosevelt would not carry this year?

Jim indicated he thought such a question was both amusing and absurd, but he dodged a direct answer. He believed that Mr. Roosevelt would receive more electoral votes this year than he did in 1932—when he lost only six States. Was he serious? Certainly, he was serious, said Jim, suggesting that his interviewers call him up on election night if his prophecy did not materialize.

Standing before him were half a hundred hard-boiled Washington correspondents and political writers. It is doubtful whether five of those present believe that President Roosevelt will receive more electoral votes this year than in 1932—a number of them believe the outcome of this year's election is doubtful. Yet the national committee chairman did not bat an eye.

Subsequent questions developed that "smiling Jim" believed the Democrats would carry Pennsylvania this year. Apparently he figures that if President Roosevelt can capture this State's 36 electoral votes, he could lose several smaller States than he carried in 1932 and still come out ahead.

A Pennsylvanian present thought it was ridiculous to contend that the Democrats would carry that State and said so. Smiling Jim retorted it was not ridiculous at all. Wasn't John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, with the Democrats this year and would he not influence a few thousand votes?

No, he would not name the States he thought President Roosevelt might lose. He was not so foolish as to believe the Democrats would carry every State, but if he named those which probably would be lost he would discourage the party workers in those States before the campaign started.

Such a performance as that given by Jim Farley is old stuff. It is designed to pep up the party workers, spread an atmosphere of optimism and confidence and chill the hopes of the opposition. But the really remarkable thing is that Jim Farley sincerely believes that the Roosevelt outlook is as cheerful as he contends. Not only does he believe it but he makes other people believe it.

Jim Farley is a disturbing factor to political writers. In the past he has been right more often than wrong. In the 1932 campaign he sat in the Democratic party headquarters in the Biltmore Hotel and day after day predicted that Herbert Hoover would not carry more than five States. His audiences of newspaper correspondents openly scoffed. Most of those writers were convinced Mr. Roosevelt would be elected, but they did not think it would be the landslide which it was and which Mr. Farley predicted.

Coming to Washington, Mr. Farley predicted that the eighteenth amendment would be repealed within one year after Congress submitted the question. Tommyrot, asserted veteran observers. Why, no amendment in the Constitution had been adopted so quickly after its submission. It would take two or three years at the best to repeal prohibition. It was repealed in less than 11 months. Is Jim Farley right now—or is he whistling in the graveyard?

Lobby Register Each 3 Months Urged in House

By the Associated Press.

Enactment of legislation to require registration of lobbyists and statements of their activities and finances every three months was recommended to Congress yesterday by the House Rules Committee.

The committee said its inquiry into lobbying for and against the utility holding company bill last session had produced "little or no evidence of any improper contacts between this lobby and the membership of the House."

Charging, nevertheless, that Howard C. Hopson, head of the Associated Gas & Electric System and center of the investigation, had displayed an "arrogant attitude" toward Congress, the committee said further study of his statements might necessitate another report.

Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), New York, of the committee said last December that Hopson's failure to respond to a committee demand that he produce certain financial records might result in disciplinary action.

The report exonerated both Representative Brewster (Republican), Maine, and Thomas G. Corcoran, Reconstruction Corporation attorney, of "corruption or moral turpitude," but added that the committee did "not approve of the activities of either of the gentlemen."

Brewster had charged Corcoran with threatening that unless he voted for the holding company bill, under which eventual abolition of "unnecesasry" concerns is proposed, the Passamaquoddy tidewater dam project in Maine might be held up. Corcoran denied the charge.

The report said the holding companies' "extensive and expensive lobby accomplished at Washington little more than the lavish expenditure of money which really belonged to the stockholders of these companies."

It added that there was no evidence of use of "the large amount of money collected and expended" in "any efforts directly undertaken to influence the membership of the House," explaining that the funds seemed "to have been expended mostly in the propaganda campaign and in keeping at Washington a highly expensive and inefficient aggregation."

A general lobby investigation by a special Senate committee headed by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, is still under way.

Black disclosed yesterday his committee has sent subpenas to telegraph companies in an effort to trace attempts to influence legislation.

In urging enactment of the lobby registration bill by Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, the committee said its inquiry has disclosed "a general condition that is unwholesome and should not be permitted to exist."

Citizens and interests affected by legislation have "the highest right and privilege to be heard,—a right that should be neither denied nor abridged," the report said, but it commended that members of Congress and the public also "have a right to know by whom, and in whose interests, such appeals are made, by whom these movements are financed, and the manner in which money is expended."

'Discoverer' of Redfern Is Arrested for Fraud

Georgetown, British Guiana, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Paramaribo Newspaper, the Banier, said today that Alfred Harred, reportedly a member of a boundary commission, who last week told of finding Paul Redfern, missing American flier, had been arrested for fraud.

Harred's account of a journey into the jungle with Art Williams, former United States Army pilot, told of discovering Redfern living among a tribe of Indians who regarded him as a white god.

SECTION 304 OF THE BANKING ACT OF 1933, which amended Section 22 of the Banking Act of 1933, provides that the additional liability imposed upon shareholders in national banking associations by the provisions of Section 5151, U. S. Revised Statutes, as amended, and Section 23 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, shall cease on July 1, 1937, with respect to all shares issued by any association which shall be transacting the business of banking on July 1, 1937: Provided, That not less than six months prior to such date such association shall have caused notice of such prospective termination of liability to be published in a newspaper published in the city, town or county in which such association is located, and if no newspaper is published in such city, town or county, then in a newspaper of general circulation therein. If the association fail to give such notice as and when above provided, a termination of such additional liability may thereafter be accomplished as of the date six months subsequent to publication, in the manner above provided. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 304 of the Banking Act of 1935, notice is hereby given by the Riggs National Bank of Washington, D. C., in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, that the liability imposed upon the holders of shares of its common stock by the provisions of Section 5151, U. S. Revised Statutes, as amended, and Section 23 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, shall cease on July 1, 1937. By order of the Board of Directors. GEORGE O. VASS, Cashier.

Gibson Brands New Ship Bill As 'President's'

Postoffice and Commerce Heads Seek Agreement; Impasse Feared.

By the Associated Press.

A showdown on ship subsidy legislation appeared more probable yesterday as a new bill, reportedly backed by President Roosevelt, was introduced in the Senate.

Coincidentally, Postoffice and Commerce Department officials conferred in an attempt to arrive at an agreement which they hope to submit to President Roosevelt before the end of this week. The departments have been deadlocked for weeks over the form of proposed legislation to pay an outright subsidy in place of the present mail contract system.

The new merchant marine bill, introduced by Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, was described by Senator Gibson (Republican), Vermont, as "the President's bill—I know it!"

The Postoffice - Commerce conferees declared they "hadn't even seen" the Guffey bill, and insisted they were still trying to work out an agreement by suggesting amendments to an earlier bill by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York.

Gibson himself introduced a third merchant marine bill yesterday, and hope of clearing the confused legislative situation apparently awaited a conference between Copeland, Guffey, Gibson and Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, of the Senate committee which investigated ocean mail contracts.

Meanwhile, Postmaster General Farley said:

"If something isn't done at this session of Congress, a very bad situation will arise. However, I'm confident that a bill of some character will be passed."

He recalled that the President's authority to cancel present ocean mail contracts expires on March 31.

The main point of difference—how long ship operators should be given to close their mail contracts and join the subsidy plan—was given a different treatment in each bill. Postoffice experts insist on a 90-day period, while Commerce Department experts declare shippers should be given a year.

Flood Danger Hinges On Ice Gorge Formation in the Potomac.

Plans for evacuation of families on the Potomac River above Key Bridge are in readiness in the event that the area is flooded early today by high tides and the swollen stream.

As flood crests raced down from the headwaters of the Potomac, Seventh Precinct police completed their arrangements to move the score of families that live along the river banks.

There is no immediate danger of general flood conditions in the Capital so long as the huge ice chunks in the river do not gorge the channel, the Weather Bureau said.

Ominous rises in the levels in the upper reaches of the river, reported early yesterday, had been checked later in the day, as huge blocks of ice raced downstream toward Great Falls.

River Mostly Open.

Most of the river between Sycamore Island and Harpers Ferry was reported open by the Weather Bureau and there was a general recession of water.

When the Norfolk-Washington steamship Northland arrived at Washington yesterday she was the first vessel to make the trip from this city since February 1.

Officials of the Norfolk & Washington Line announced that regular scheduled service would begin today.

It was reported that, while there is considerable ice in the river and bay, navigators are more concerned over the lack of buoys and lights which have been carried away by the ice.

Fear of danger for Williamsport, Md., engendered by an 18-foot rise in six hours, were allayed late yesterday as the crest started to recede at the rate of a foot an hour. The rise was caused by an ice jam, which broke early yesterday.

Cumberland, Md., reported at 2 p. m. that the river had fallen 1.4 feet. Hancock had stationary waters, and gradual falling off of the water was reported at Sycamore Island, a few miles above Great Falls.

Gorge Threatens.

An ice gorge in Capon River, east of Wardensville, W. Va., was reported to be threatening a number of summer cottages and a herd of cattle marooned on an island. Many of the cottages are owned by Winchester people who use them for summer dwellings. Some in the neighborhood of Yellow Springs which were occupied have been abandoned.

The Shenandoah River at Strasburg was reported flooding low bottom lands and to be several feet above normal at Berrys Ferry, east of Millwood.

Heavy formations of huge ice blocks jammed the Potomac between Key and Chain bridges. Swirling torrents raced through a small channel near the Virginia shore.

Pushes Ice on Shores.

The jam pushed ice up on both shores of the river and filled the front yards of river-bank dwellers.

Weather Bureau observers kept their eye on the open channel. If this fills up and an engorgement follows, that will make the only immediate threat of flood waters about Washington.

At a number of points in the upper river, the banks were overflowed but none of the inundatinos reached flood proportions. A number of small boats were carried away by the rushing waters.

Minor jams were reported at the pier heads of the Highway, Key, Memorial and Chain bridges but they were broken up by their own pressure and the force of the water.

In Western Pennsylvania, the Associated Press reported, the Allegheny River unloosed tremendous piles of ice, flooded a number of small communities and caused a death toll of four.

One Killed in Explosion.

Frank Miller, 45, was killed by a premature explosion of dynamite near Emporium, Pa. He was setting the explosive to break up an ice jam.

Edward Finn, 19, colored, was drowned in the Monogahela near McKeesport.

William Buttsnitz, 10, was drowned near Pittsburgh.

In the downtown sections of Pittsburgh, water swept into basements of business houses and homes.

At Parker's landing, north of Pittsburgh, water rose in the streets to the depth of 4 feet.

Hitler Names Envoy.

Berlin, Feb. 27 (AP).—Adolf Hitler named Count Johannes von Welczeck German Ambassador to France today, to succeed the late Roland Koester.

Ice Jams Menace River Residents

The Potomac River's ice sheet broke up yesterday and under the pressure of rising water huge ice cakes were shoved up on shore. Several riverside residences were in danger of being smashed. Ice jams between Key and Chain bridges brought flood menace.

Paralysis, Sleeping Sickness Prevented in Mice, Monkeys

New Treatment of Picric Acid Inoculations Provides 30 to 80% Immunity; Discoverers Doubt Value to Humans.

By the United Press.

A new technique, which gives a "protective effect" against infantile paralysis and sleeping sickness, has been tested successfully on mice and monkeys, it was learned last night. Drs. Charles Armstrong and W. T. Harrison, both connected with the research laboratories of the United States Public Health Service, found that 0.32 to 0.64 per cent of picric acid—a yellow powder one may buy at a drug store—dropped into the nostrils tended to prevent infection of mice with the St. Louis type of sleeping sickness and monkeys with infantile paralysis.

Colleagues of the experimenters pointed out that no claims should be made for possible effectiveness of the picric acid solution on human beings. While the laboratory workers injected the solution into their own noses without bad effect, they have not established that the treatment which established immunity of 30 to 80 per cent of the mice and monkeys treated would be equally effective on man.

For several years, doctors have sought to control these two "plagues" of modern civilization. The outbreak of sleeping sickness in St. Louis, which claimed more than 100 victims while physicians were powerless to curb the epidemic, started research into this little-known disease. An infantile paralysis outbreak which moved from South Carolina to New York along the Atlantic Coast last year left a toll of hundreds crippled and scores dead.

Last year, Dr. Armstrong, known as "the human guinea pig" because he contracted several of the diseases on which he was experimenting, announced that a 4 per cent solution of alum sprayed into the nose had cut down the number of cases of infantile paralysis and sleeping sickness in laboratory animals.

A report on his more recent work, which has not yet been published, shows that the picric acid solution is even more successful. One injection into the nose gives 30 to 80 per cent immunity for four to seven days.

Picric acid is an ordinary drug. A quarter's worth would last for a month's treatment.

Physicians generally agree that the virus of these two diseases enter the nervous system through the mucous membrane. They say that these nasal membranes are the only place in the body where the nervous system is on the surface. Small hair-like projections from the brain go to the membrance, thus making a vulnerable spot for infection.

Discussing action of the picric acid, the report of the two research workers says:

"Picric acid, as here employed, apparently produced no general ill effects in mice or monkeys; neither did it produce changes detectable by ordinary pathological methods in the nasal mucous membranes of the latter. That it exerts protection through a local action is, however, indicated by the fact that picric acid intranasally administered to mice apparently affords no protection against virus inoculated into the head.

"This local action may consist in some alteration in the nasal membranes which render them less permeable to the virus, although it is conceivable that the drug, either free or united with the cells of these structures, may exert a direct effect upon the virus itself."

Flood Bell

Is Unheard, But Police Say Owner Is Safe.

Mrs. Eva Dell Myer, who inhabits Myers Island in the Potomac opposite Glen Echo, was the object of much concern last night.

The woman, who only last year was forced off her island by a flood and nearly lost her life when her rowboat overturned, had agreed with Glen Echo residents that she would ring a bell if the present flood rose high enough to endanger her.

The residents, after nightfall, realized that they would not be able to hear the bell because roaring waters and crunching ice made too much noise.

The Glen Echo Fire Department went down to the river bank to determine if an attempt to reach the island would be feasible. When firemen saw that a house on the bank, lower than Mrs. Myer's island residence was not in danger, they decided that she was probably safe and went home.

Hoffman Plans New Attacks on State Evidence

May Question Lindbergh Testimony Identifying Hauptmann's Voice.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 27.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, in his last-minute fight to save Bruno Hauptmann from the electric chair, intends to attack the testimony of virtually every witness the State called to identify the convicted murderer of the Lindbergh baby.

This may even include the testimony of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who swore the voice he heard in St. Raymonds Cemetery on the night the ransom was paid was that of Hauptmann. Hoffman will not question Lindbergh's veracity, it was said, but he will point out it is difficult to remember a voice for three years.

Against that campaign, Attorney General David I. Wilentz is starting one of his own—determined that Hauptmann shall die in the electric chair in the week of March 30.

Wilentz has discovered a ruling of the New Jersey Supreme Court, made in 1896, which stipulates the Governor shall have no power of reprieve beyond 90 days after conviction in a capital case. Hauptmann was convicted February 13, 1935. Under the 1896 ruling, Hoffman lost the reprieve power on May 13, 1935.

The attorney general did not oppose granting of the first reprieve, although he warned the Governor he believed it to be illegal. But if any further reprieve is granted, the attorney general is prepared to go before the New Jersey Supreme Court and contest it, citing the old ruling.

If that action is successful, mandamus proceedings could be started against Warden Mark O. Kimberling of Trenton State Prison, compelling him to execute Hauptmann despite contrary orders from the Governor.

Hoffman, who already has accused Millard Whited, a prosecution witness, of lying, turned his attention today to Joseph Perrone, a Bronx taxi driver.

At the Flemington trial Perrone identified Hauptmann as the man who gave him a dollar to carry a note to Dr. John F. Condon during negotiations for payment of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom.

The Governor said Perrone's identification of Hauptmann was vague and uncertain. He charged that Perrone had identified "several people" as the man who gave him the dollar.

"In no case," Hoffman said, "was the description similar to Hauptmann. The man that Perrone thought looked like the suspect was Otto Steinert, who formerly lived near Princeton. Steinert does not resembled Hauptmann any more than Al Reich (Condon's bodyguard) resembles one of the Singer Midgets.

"In addition Perrone stated that a few days after he attended the Bronx County grand jury, (which ordered Hauptmann held for New Jersey authorities) he had taken a passenger to City Island and there had observed Dr. Condon talking to a man whom he thought was the man who gave him the note."

Farmer Admits Killing Wife With Chloroform

Ithaca, Mich., Feb. 27 (AP).—George Blank, 24-year-old farmer-Sunday school superintendent, made a signed confession tonight that he chloroformed his wife, Bernice, in their Gratiot County farm home January 5, and then set her oil-soaked clothing afire. The confession was made through his attorney, State Senator Edward H. Fehling.

Broker Faces SEC Charges In Stock Deals

Suspension Threatens Witness at Pecora Hearing Over Air Issues.

Charles C. Wright, wealthy and socially prominent Wall street broker, who testified freely to his activities as a specialist in 1933 alcohol poo' stock market operations before the Pecora committee in February, 1934, yesterday was ordered by the Securities and Exchange Commission to show cause, on March 30, why he should not be suspended or expelled from five exchanges.

The cause given was his alleged operations and manipulations of the stock of Kinner Airplane and Motor Corporation, Ltd., a California corporation, on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, from January 1, 1935, throughout last year.

He would be suspended or expelled from the New York Stock Exchange, the New York Curb Exchange, the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, the Chicago Stock Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade.

The case against the broker, who is commodore of the exclusive Knickerbocker Yacht Club of Long Island, is compared in significance and prominence of the broker involved, to the case against Michael J. Meehan, whose alleged manipulation of the stock of Bellance Aircraft Corporation is now being heard by the commission.

Wright, a member of the New York Stock Exchange since about 1926, and a broker of some prominence for more than 17 years, is believed by the commission to have violated the manipulation provision of the securities and exchange act in the Kinner company's common stock. No figures were available as to the volume or extent of his manipulations.

He is not a member of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange on which the alleged violations took place. The alleged transactions were said to have consisted of matched orders, wash sales, and manipulations to raise the prices of the stock and to create a false impression of activity.

"Wash" sales are sales of stocks arranged by two co-operating parties so that a sale is made by a person knowing that another person is coming into the market to purchase the stock. The stock is then resold back and forth, to create the false impression and to lift the price.

Wright reached prominence when it was brought out before the Pecora committee that he was a specialist in the American Commercial Alcohol pool of spring-summer in 1933. In the pre-repeal bull market alcohol stock prices soared, and the Pecora committee, in February, 1934, investigated the pool among other aspects of the market. Wright was said to have made some $138,000 profits from those deals.

2 Units Investigate Sale of Army Guns

By the Associated Press.

Concerned over the chance that "mutilated" Army machine guns may have gotten into underworld hands in reconditioned shape, the Justice Department and the War Department are both investigating sales of such weapons as "junk."

Attorney General Cummings told reporters yesterday that a new law, to prevent such "leaks," may be submitted to the present session of Congress.

Witnesses at a recent Senate munitions investigation said that one lot of "mutilated" machine guns had been restored and sold to South American revolutionaries. One witness testified an Army machine gun sold as "junk" had been used in an underworld killing.

Army ordnance experts maintained, however, that guns "mutilated" according to orders could not be successfully restored.

Borah Is Only Hope of G.O.P., Gannett Avers

No Other Candidate Can 'Beat Roosevelt,' Is Publisher's View.

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Frank E. Gannett, newspaper publisher whose name is on the Ohio primary ballot as "second choice" to Senator William Borah, asserted today the Senator provided the only hope of accomplishing what Gannett said must be the Republican campaign cry—"Beat Roosevelt."

Gannett said "the issue today deals with the saving of fundamental Americanism itself."

"We must remember it will take more Republican votes to elect a Republican President this year," the publisher added. "It will take the votes of Independents and Liberals and Democrats dissatisfied with the New Deal.

Borah 'The Candidate.'

"Senator Borah, whose courage, independence and long fight for the betterment of the common people, combined with his devotion to the Constitution and his reverence for the Supreme Court, will be the candidate to win these votes."

Gannett would not discuss the possibility that in the event Borah secured the Republican nomination, he would choose the publisher as his running mate.

Some observers say a powerful vote-getting combination could be effected in that way, with Borah strong in the agricultural States and Gannett appealing to the conservative East.

"Regardless of the outcome of the election," said Gannett, "we will have a Democratic Senate for four years and any Republican President would have difficulty in enacting a sweeping program of his own.

"But within the next four years, the President will have in his hands the appointment of four or five Supreme Court justices to fill vacancies which are almost certain to occur in the natural order of things.

Court Seats Objective.

"I would much prefer to have Borah appoint them than to have judges appointed who would be sympathetic to the New Deal, to a planned economy, and to further centralization in Washington of greater and greater powers and control over agriculture, industry and all other enterprises."

Gannett's newspapers in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Illinois supported the Roosevelt Administration for the first six months, "but I couldn't go along any further when he inaugurated the program of scarcity and planned economy through NRA, AAA and all other restrictive agencies."

Housing Plan

homes for families with incomes of $1,000 to $1,500 or less. These families, it was stated, comprise from one-half to two-thirds of the population. The statement declared that private industry, even with the aid of Government-insured mortgages, could not do the job, and that local governments could not do it alone.

Under the heading of "power and appropriations," the announcement said:

"The Federal Government must expect to supply practically all of the subsidy needed to make up the difference between 'economic rent' and what low-income families can pay. For this purpose, the authority must have the power to make capital grants, loans at less than the cost of the money and clearly defined contractual annual grants.

"The authority must have the power to make self-liquidating loans to local agencies. These agencies should be encouraged, however, to raise as much of their capital as possible themselves, and that the authority should have the power to guarantee the obligations of local agencies.

"Since most local authorities will be inexperienced and unable to take their full share of responsibility at the outset, and since immediate construction and widespread demonstrations of modern housing standards are essential, the authority must itself have the power to construct and manage housing projects.

"To carry out these purposes, the authority should receive in this session of Congress an appropriation of $500,000,000 to be expended within the next two years."

These suggestions were an amplification of a housing program already adopted by the American Federation of Labor.

The federation also insisted that union wage rates be paid on construction work and that minimum physical standards of construction and design be set up for each region.

Meanwhile, John H. Fahey, head of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, in a letter to Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, agreed with critics of his organization that operations of the HOLC had upset the mortgage market.

Fahey wrote to Fletcher in opposition to the Borah bill which would reduce interest rates on HOLC mortgages from 5 per cent to 3 per cent. Fahey said the HOLC loans were "as liberal as is consistent with the public interest."

"If the corporation rate were lowered it would unquestionably have a deterrent effect on mortgage lending agencies just at the time when a definite revival of home building has started and money is being made available freely for mortgage loans."

Castles In the Air

FHA Insured Loans Go Mostly to Refinancing; Hope Expressed New RFC Company Will Help Bring Construction Upturn.

Following is the fifth of a series of articles based on an investigation of the housing problem, the Federal efforts to encourage building and probable new legislation.

Copyright, 1936, by The Washington Post.

By Felix Bruner.

NOT since the Blue Eagle strutted and soared across the country has any New Deal undertaking been subjected to so much ballyhoo as the Federal Housing Administration. Yet there appears to be little general knowledge of just what has been accomplished and of the limitations of this organization.

The purpose of the FHA is stated briefly in its second annual report:

"The Federal Housing Administration is responsible under the terms of the National housing act for insuring privately made loans of the following types: (a) Short-term character loans made for the repair and modernization of homes and other buildings; (b) long-term mortgages on homes, and (c) mortgages on large-scale housing projects."

That just about covers the legal purposes of the organization. Of at least equal importance, however, has been its work in encouraging building revival, of stirring up interest in the housing situation.

Actually, expressed in dollars and in numbers of homes involved, the accomplishments of the FHA have not been extensive in proportion to the need for houses.

By far the greatest number of mortgages "accepted for insurance" by the FHA are renewals of already existing obligations and not mortgages on new construction. Incidentally, the FHA is consistently declining to make public the amount of mortgage insurance actually in force. It is explained at FHA that mortgages accepted for insurance either are actually insured or in the process of being insured and that the "accepted" figure is an actual reflection of accomplishments.

Thus far the FHA has "accepted for insurance" the refinancing of 29,787 mortgages on old property. The amount of these loans totals $110,346,608. Against this figure mortgages on only 12,360 new houses have been accepted for insurance for a total of $60,248,256.

Larger Loans, Longer Time Provided.

Here is the way the insurance program operates for construction of a new house:

The prospective owner or builder must submit detailed plans to the FHA for approval of building standards and for appraisal. The FHA appraisers set a value of the house and lot. Then the prospective owner must go to a bank or other lending agency and arrange for a loan. If the loan can be obtained, the FHA insures the lender against loss.

Loans up to 80 per cent of the value of the property are insured. They may run—if the lender agrees to make that kind of loan—as long as 20 years. Payments covering interest and retirement of principal must be made monthly. The interest rate is nominally 5 per cent, but added to this is a one-half of 1 per cent "service charge," which goes to the lender, and the insurance charge of one-half of 1 per cent which goes to the FHA insurance fund. Thus the carrying cost actually is 6 per cent.

Thus, in most communities, FHA loans are no cheaper than loans made without the insurance feature. The advantage to the home owner is that he may secure a larger loan and have a longer time in which to pay it. The insurance charge is figured on the total amount of the loan and continues to be paid on this basis regardless of how much the loan may be reduced. This really brings the carrying cost considerably above 6 per cent over a period of years.

It probably will be five years before sufficient money is paid into the mutual mortgage insurance fund to make it self-operating. There is one possibility, however, of the buyer's costs being reduced. The fund, being mutual, may eventually earn enough that persons making payments on homes can have some of their money returned in the form of dividends. All payments, which also must include monthly installments on taxes and fire insurance, are made directly to the lending agencies and not to the Government. The agencies turn the insurance premiums over to the FHA.

An additional charge of $3 per $1,000 of each mortgage is made by the FHA for its services in appraising the property involved.

Lending Agencies Object to Long Term.

Under the law the FHA may insure mortgages for new construction up to a total of $1,000,000,000 and may insure refinancing in the same amount. Only a little more than 6 per cent of the former authorization and 11 per cent of the latter thus far has been used.

In spite of the Government insurance guaranty the FHA has experienced considerable difficulty in persuading lending agencies in many communities to co-operate. The principal objection has been to loans of as long as 20 years at comparatively low interest rates. With the air full of inflation talk and with the future still uncertain, many lenders are not inclined to tie up their money—even though it is insured—on such long-term contracts. Also, many banks and other agencies, accustomed to making loans payable at the end of a given period, are not geared to handle mortgages on a monthly payment basis.

A step forward in eliminating this objection was taken recently when an agreement was reached with the RFC Mortgage Co. by which the company will furnish the facilities of a mortgage discount bank for the purpose of purchasing mortgages given for new construction and insured by the FHA.

A notice was sent recently to all financial institutions telling them that the RFC Mortgage Co. will purchase such mortgages from original mortgagees for the unpaid principal amount less ½ of 1 per cent, plus accrued interest, where the mortgagee agrees to continue servicing them. This will give lending organizations an opportunity to discount mortgages and to maintain liquidity.

Expect New Construction to Pick Up.

The RFC organization will thus do something of the same job as is being done by the Federal Home Loan Bank System and as is proposed for mortgage associations. The Housing Administration organization, however, still is friendly to the idea of organizing mortgage associations to provide liquidity for banks. It is possible that such associations could be organized without new legislation. The RFC has a $10,000,000 revolving fund available for purchase of mortgages.

"One effect of the RFC agreement," Stewart McDonald, FHA administrator, said, "will be to accelerate the rate of new residential construction. There are some 10,000 lending institutions, constituting practically the entire banking resources of the Nation, qualified for operation through the Finance Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration. Now with the whole resources of the RFC Mortgage Co. behind the Federal Housing Administration's insured mortgages, new capital will flow into the mortgage field in increasing volume to meet the anticipated trend in new home construction."

Landon Scored In Educators' 2d Challenge

Official Asks Kansan if He Would Restrict Relief and Education.

By the United Press.

St. Louis, Feb. 27.—America's educators directed a new attack at the Presidential aspirations of Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas tonight, charging that his balanced budget represented drastic sacrifices to relief and education.

A challenge by George A. Davis, of Cleveland, secretary of the American Federation of Teachers, was the second to emerge from the sixty-sixth annual convention of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association.

Davis asked Landon:

"If elected President of the United States, would you approve balancing the Federal budget by similarly restricting education for American children and relief funds for American families in need?"

His telegram demanded an answer to an earlier challenge by Dr. Charles A. Beard, noted historian. Beard questioned the political advocacy of the Kansas Governor by William Randolph Hearst.

"Doubtless you know Hearst's efforts to place the schools under control of reactionary forces, to reduce Federal relief and to cripple the power of the American labor movement. Doubtless you are aware of the just characterization of Hearst as one of the worst subversive influences in America," Davis said.

"Your response will be reported to the American Federation of Labor, with which the American Federation of Teachers is affiliated."

Davis' challenge was indorsed by Willard E. Givens, of Washington, executive secretary of the N. E. A.

"I am informed that large numbers of Kansas teachers are receiving less than $350 a year," Givens commented. "Under Kansas law, schools and localities cannot borrow funds.

"Parents and educators have a right to know where ever candidate for the Presidency stands on this issue. Does Mr. Landon want to restrict the schools, as in Italy and Gerany, and put youth in labor camps."

Militant Session.

St. Louis, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Nation's educators, concluding one of the most militant sessions in the history of the public schools, tonight were pledged to campaign for academic freedom as a safeguard of democracy.

Speakers at the closing meeting of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association urged that controversial contemporary issues — including Fascism, Communism and the New Deal—be taught in the classroom so that students "may learn to sift truth from propaganda."

Taft to Oppose Senator Borah For Ohio Votes

which gave him 56.3 per cent of the total. Senator Borah landed second in the vote which Chairman Ed Schorr conducted under sanction of the committee, with a total of 20.8 per cent. Col. Knox was third with 13.2 per cent; former President Hoover, fourth, with 4.1 per cent; Senator Vandenberg, fifth, with 2.9 per cent, and Senator Dickinson, sixth, with .6 per cent. Scattering votes totaled 2 per cent.

The organization slate of delegate candidates generally is considered a compromise between the supporters of Gov. Landon and those backing Col. Knox or other potential candidates. The slate of delegate candidates at large is headed by Clarence J. Brown, Col. Knox's Ohio manager, and National Committeeman Walter F. Brown, who is generally considered friendly to Gov. Landon.

Others on the organization slate include former Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati; Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, of Cincinnati, widow of Speaker Nicholas Longworth; Carmi A. Thompson, of Cleveland, and Miss Gertrude Jones, of Findlay, vice chairman of the State committee.

Chairman Schorr said Brown, former Postmaster General in the Hoover Cabinet, was selected as a delegate on a vote of 18 to 9. The opposition, he said, was led by Committeeman Fred W. Warner, of Marion, a former State chairman.

In Cincinnati Taft made no immediate comment on his selection. He has asserted in recent speeches President Roosevelt is attempting to circumvent or amend the Constitution in order to change the American governmental system.

Taft has served as Speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives and as a member of the Ohio Senate. He was born in Cincinnati, September 8, 1886, and is a graduate of Yale and Harvard.

Gov. Landon, in a telegram to the committee, said:

"It is not fair to my friends in Ohio for me to allow my name to go into the primary and not stump the State. It is not fair to the people in Kansas who elected me Governor to neglect that job in times like these in order to go up and down the country seeking delegates. Under the circumstances, therefore, I feel I must decline to enter the Ohio primary."

Knox, who already had obtained petitions to enter Ohio's primary May. 12, wired:

"The paramount need of the moment is that the Republicans of all States join ranks and march in a unified group to a Republican victory in November. Such a need transcends personal ambition. I am therefore ready to join in the plan of the Republicans of Ohio to eliminate a primary battle and bring about Republican success in November."

Senator Dickinson declared that "it is not my purpose to allow the use of my name in the Ohio primaries."

Senator Vandenberg, declared in some political circles as a "dark horse" candidate possibility, advised the committee:

"I am seeking no instructed delegates to the next Republican national convention. This is my attitude in my own State of Michigan. Manifestly it will be my attitude elsewhere. Therefore I shall not avail myself of the privilege of entering your Ohio primaries."

Roosevelt to Enter Primaries.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's re-election this year by a wider margin than he had in 1932 was forecast yesterday by James A. Farley, Democratic national committee chairman, with a smiling assertion at a press conference that he saw nothing disturbing on the political horizon.

Farley disclosed that the President will enter all Presidential primaries where his consent is required; refused to discuss his possible resignation from the Cabinet; predicted the Democratic national convention would vote on whether to retain the two-thirds rule, and replied optimistically to almost an hour's questioning on the political outlook.

The decision of the Ohio State central committee to run Robert A. Taft, son of the late President, as a favorite-son candidate, was interpreted here as a move to consolidate the strength of the Borah opposition.

Although many of the politically minded argued it would make it possible for the supporters of Gov. Landon of Kansas, Col. Frank Knox, of Illinois, and others to combine against the Idaho Senator, there was a division of opinion as to whether the strategy would prove successful.

Borah refused comment, but smiled when informed of the Ohio decision.

GROW NEW HAIR

Get rid of that old-fashioned idea that hair cannot be regrown. Science has found that the hair-growing structure (papilla) remains alive and ready to respond to proper stimulative treatment even long after hair has disappeared from the scalp.

Thomas has found a way to stimulate this dormant hair-growing structure to normal activity. First, Thomas treatment removes the causes of inactivity (usually one or more of 14 local scalp disorders) and then skillfully supplies the necessary stimulation and thus makes it possible for the hair to gain sufficient strength to push through the follicle and become visible again on the scalp.

Come in person to the nearest Thomas office TODAY and learn more about this precise, reliable method of growing hair, stopping hair-fall, and ending dandruff. No charge will be made for consultation or scalp examination. You will not be accepted for treatment unless your case comes within the scope of Thomas methods.

Attorney Loses One-Man Fight AgainstBlanton

A one-man fight against Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), Texas, failed last night at the Conduit Road Citizens Association.

Albert Lyman, a lawyer with offices in the Tower Building, was unable to get a second when he introduced and moved adoption of a resolution recommending removal of Blanton as chairman of a House Appropriations sub-committee on District finances.

The resolution assailed Blanton for his opposition to a recent mass meeting in protest against inadequate Congressional appropriations for the local health department. He also was criticized for his general attitude on District appropriations.

The organization urged appointment of William A. Robert, people's counsel, as corporation counsel to succeed E. Barrett Prettyman, resigned.

Another resolution adopted proposed purchase of a site for a District-owned airport at Benning, D. C.

The Trinidad Citizens Association indorsed the campaign for increased appropriations for the District Health Department.

The association also favored the revision of laws covering the sale of delinquent tax properties. Many abuses of the present laws were cited.

The Capital Transit Co. was severely criticized by the association for using allegedly antiquated equipment on the Florida avenue-Navy Yard line.

In other actions the group recommended the purchase of the Benning race track for an airport, indorsed Peoples Counsel William A. Roberts to succeed E. Barrett Prettyman as corporation counsel, urged licensing of claw machines and other amusement devices and urged the establishment of a fire house in the area bounded by North Capitol street, Thirteenth street northeast and B street southeast.

PWA Pushes Test On Power Grants

By the Associated Press.

Driving for early court rulings on its municipal power program, the Public Works Administration announced yesterday, the District of Columbia Supreme Court would try four suits attacking PWA allotments on March 30.

It said this was a month earlier than desired by the power companies.

Justice Jesse Adkins fixed the early hearing date after Jerome Frank, counsel for PWA, said the Administration was anxious to have the cases decided in time for appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals this spring.

PWA said lawyers for the four power companies and the Edison Institute, associated with them, asked that the suits be postponed until April because they were busy with other PWA power cases.

Contests Slated For U. S. Artists

Two national competitions, one for additional murals in the Department of Justice Building, and the other for sculpture on the facade of the new postoffice in the Bronx (New York), were announced yesterday by the Section of Painting and Sculpture, Treasury Department.

All American artists are invited to submit designs for three panels in the Justice Building, and models for the sculptures in the Bronx. The Treasury will pay $2,000 each for the panels, on the installment plan. The two successful sculptors will receive $7,500 apiece, also in installments.

Edward Bruce and Olin Dows, Washington artists, are members of the mural jury, which also includes Leon Kroll, Ernest Peixotto, Henry Schnakenberg, Jonas Lie, Bancel La Farge and Eugene Speicher, all well-known painters. For the Bronx project, the advisory jury will consist of Lee Lawrie, Maurice Sterne, Paul Manship, Edward McCartan and Thomas Harlan Ellett, the last being architect of the building.

Dr. Crile Calls Life An 'Electrical Event'

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Dr. George W. Crile, noted Cleveland surgeon, today presented his own answers to the questions of life and death that have engrossed him for half a century, and explained that all life is an electrical event in nature.

In his book, "The Phenomena of Life," published today, Dr. Crile advances the theory that all living cells are electric cells, which "die" when physical or emotional shock destroys their ability to hold or transfer energy.

All matter, he believes, is electrical, and all energy is electric, leading to the conclusion that living matter must be born of, and must be kept alive by, electric energy.

Man Pays Now, So Income Tax Rules Proclaim

Alimony Subject to Levy When Paid but Not After It's Paid.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Feb. 27.—Uncle Sam apparently ignored the old law, "It's the woman who pays," when he wrote his income-tax law.

Men now making their reports on 1935 incomes found out that and many other peculiar things today as they read regulations prepared by T. J. Conner, internal revenue collector.

A woman who receives alimony need not report the payments as taxable income, but the fellow who pays that alimony cannot deduct it from his income.

Likewise, damages collected for alienations of affections, breach of promise, personal injury, slander and libel aren't taxable nor are marriage settlement or marriage separation agreement payments.

But the fellow who pays damage for breach of promise or other settlement can't deduct that payment from his income and he was to put down in income the amount he paid his attorney as well.

On the other hand, a beautiful woman who wins a beauty contest must list the prize as income. The Government says prizes so won, and also the $6.40 you collected on that $2 ticket on "he won" in the sixth race, must be listed as income and taxed. But, the $28 you dropped on the ponies can't be deducted.

If you parked too long and paid a fine, you cannot deduct it, but—here's a break—if your car skidded on icy streets and it cost you $88 to repair it, or if you froze the motor and had to have a new one, you can deduct that from income.

The farmer who collected AAA benefits must list those as income, but the householder whose house was damaged by fire, a bursting boiler or freezing pipes can deduct what it cost him.

But if someone bombed the place, the Government can't be bothered; it wants its share nevertheless just as it collects on the winnings in your poker game, but doesn't give you credit for your losses.

If you lose your job you may deduct the fee the employment agency charged you when you looked for a new one. You also may deduct labor union dues and professional society dues, but if you went on strike you must list as net income strike benefits paid you by the union.

Pressmen's Union Head May Seek Governorship

By the Associated Press.

Maj. George L. Berry, president of the Printing Pressmen's Union, told reporters yesterday he had "inclinations" to run for Governor of Tennessee this year.

"I am neither in nor out of the race, but my inclinations are to get in," Berry said when asked about reports that he would enter the Democratic primaries.

Berry has been President Roosevelt's co-ordinator for industrial cooperation during the past six months, seeking a method for cooperation between labor and industry to promote recovery. He was defeated for the Democratic nominaiton for Governor by 82 votes in 1914. He was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Vice President in 1924.

Move to Amend Act Threatens Compensation

Measure Withdrawn When Sponsor Learns Its Far-Reaching Effects.

An innocent looking bill, introduced yesterday by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, would have nullified the District workmen's compensation act had it been enacted into law.

Unaware of its broad effects, Hobbs sought to amend the act of May 17, 1928, which made the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation act of 1927 the District workmen's compensation act. His amendment aimed to confine the effects of the 1928 law to "maritime employment."

After introducing the measure, Hobbs learned that it would have the effect of abolishing workmen's compensation in the District for all save maritime workers. He then withdrew it and said he would prepare a substitute.

"I merely intended to eliminate certain legislative employes who now come under the benefits of the act," he said. "I did not realize that the 1928 act was the whole District workmen's compensation act."

There is now pending in the House calendar a broad bill to amend the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' compensation act by liberalizing many of its provisions. It was reported favorably last year by the judiciary committee.

So far this session the bill has been objected to or passed over every time it has been reached on the calendar.

Navy Post Offer To Brann Rumored

Augusta, Me., Feb. 27 (AP).—Gov. Louis J. Brann was homeward bound today from a three week's vacation in Florida while rumors were current at the State capital he had been offered the post of Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Brann conferred at the White House in Washington yesterday with President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Farley.

No intimation that the post vacated by the death of Assistant Secretary Henry L. Roosevelt had been offered to the Maine Governor came from any official source in Washington. Brann was due home tonight.

50 Rumanians Hurt as Police Fire at Radicals

Communist Trial Cause of Disorder; Lupescu Also Is Denounced.

By the United Press.

Bucharest, Rumania, Feb. 27.—More than 50 persons were wounded when police fired on communists and socialists following widespread rioting today.

Radical demonstrations started this morning as a protest against the prosecution's actions in the trial of Anna Pauker and other communists charged with treason.

During the afternoon the rioting became general.

Aimed at Lupescu.

The demonstrations were directed in part against Magda Lupescu, red-haired Jewess who has become notorious as the mistress of King Carol II.

Armored cars were called out shortly before midnight and rumbled grimly through the streets, bristling with machine guns. Police said, however, they were brought out merely as a precaution and that it was not likely the machine guns would be used.

Crowds paraded through many of the principal thoroughfares shouting imprecations at the government.

Groups from both the left and right wing radical parties were participating in the demonstrations and police feared they would begin fighting each other. Nationalists started counter-demonstrations, shouting: "Down with Moscow! Down with Lupescu! Down with the Jews!"

None of those wounded was hurt seriously.

At midnight police said they were in control of the situation, and that fire brigades had dispersed the mobs by turning water on the rioters. Police denied shots were fired, but newspapermen on the spot said they heard repeated volleys.

Public hatred of Mlle. Lupescu has been increasing in recent weeks since she went to Paris to join King Carol after his visit to London to attend the funeral of the late King George V of England.

time, when the present ban on communication was revealed.

All Radios Are Silent.

Singapore (Friday), Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Rumors were circulated in the Japanese community today that fighting has started in Tokyo between rebel forces and forces loyal to the government.

The rumors apparently were based largely on the fact that radio broadcasts from Tokyo stations, which ordinarily are picked up here at every hour of the day, could not be heard. The Tokyo stations had been silent for more than two hours.

Condolences Are Sent to Japanese by Hull

Secretary Hull has sent the following message to the Japanese foreign minister, Koki Hirota, through the American Embassy in Tokyo:

"On behalf of the American Government and people, I assure you of the deep regret with which we have learned of the death of distinguished officials of the Japanese government, and I extend to you our sincere condolences."

They See and Fear a Pacific War

Harris & Ewing.

'Pacific War' Danger Is Cited In Plea for Improved Shipping

By the Associated Press.

A war in the Pacific was pictured yesterday to the House Naval Committee, to emphasize a plea for building up West Coast ship-construction facilities.

Representative Lea (Democrat), California, representing West Coast Congressional delegations, appeared before the committee to urge a 6 per cent differential in favor of Pacific Coast shipbuilders, in the proposed ten-year program for construction of 54 naval auxiliary vessels.

Lea told the committee it would be a direct benefit to the Navy to have more adequate facilities on the West Coast, should an emergency arise. He emphasized the national defense feature of ship-repair and shipbuilding facilities.

"We must prepare the Navy, on the assumption we will have a war," declared Lea. "Picture a great contest in the Pacific, and realize that we must be able to build, repair and maintain ships on the West Coast.

"We must assume we are going to have a war in the Pacific, possibly with a power far out in the Pacific, and we must provide for our Navy on the West Coast with that in mind."

The Navy Department is opposed to the differential.

Martin Dead on Coast; Ex-Veterans' Official

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—Funeral services will be tomorrow for W. D. Martin, 53, World War Medical Corps and Veterans' Bureau executive, who died at his home here Tuesday.

Girl Musher in Yukon Feared Lost on Trail

Fairbanks, Alaska, Feb. 27 (AP).—Fear grew tonight that disaster may have befallen diminutive Mary Joyce, 27, mushing along a 1,000-mile trail with a dog team "just for the experience," because she was reported five days overdue at Tanana Crossing.

The comely Taku lodge mistress, of southeastern Alaska, left Borwash Landing, Yukon Territory, February 9, while the temperature was 48 below zero for the 300-mile leg of her journey to Tanana Crossing, a telegraph station 150 miles west of here. She started her 1,000-mile trip from Taku to Fairbanks on December 22.

Tokyo Unaware Of Army Coup Until Its End

Phone Message Tells How Crusade of Death Was Carried Out.

ward, there was absolutely nothing to indicate that anything unusual was occurring.

Not until martial law was proclaimed and troops began appearing on the streets was Tokyo aware of the gruesome killings.

Details of the actual murders were scarce.

We do know that when the assassins entered Lord Saito's house Lady Saito stepped between her husband and the killers.

"Save him! Kill me! Spare him for the country!" she cried.

The soldiers wounded Lady Saito in the arm and then killed her husband with a pistol shot.

For 24 hours after the assassinations and while the assassins and their followers were barricaded in police headquarters and other public buildings, the officials did nothing about them.

Their first act was to canvass the entire army to ascertain whether any other unit was involved in the plot.

Investigation showed that the four army captains involved acted alone.

At 9 o'clock Tuesday night, they assembled their soldiers and told them to prepare for a march.

At midnight, marching orders were issued.

All was carried out with clocklike precision.

Apparently, all the assassinations occurred simultaneously.

As far as we know, there were no deaths except those already announced.

We learned definitely that Count Nonuaki Makino, former lord keeper of the privy seal, escaped and is safe at a farmhouse in the mountains near the hot springs resort of Yugawara, about 80 miles from Tokyo. A detail of 10 of the military assassins was sent to Yugawara to kill Makino, who was saved by a policeman and the countess, who fought off the assailants until Makino had time to flee into the fields.

The policeman was killed and Countess Makino slightly injured. The assassins bombed the inn with hand grenades and subsequently set fire to the ruins.

Nobody knows who fired the actual shots or made the sword thrusts.

The officers who have been called upon to submit to arrest and trial, or take the gentleman's way out, are charged with having led their troops without permission, of having usurped the prerogatives of the high command, and of having been disloyal to the throne.

The soldiers who followed them will not be charged.

The war office emphasizes that they simply followed the orders of their officers who, to them, are the direct representatives of his imperial Japanese majesty, the Emperor Hirohito.

Undoubtedly, the assassinations have made a profound impression.

That is demonstrated by the fact that the officials in control are making every effort to learn the reaction of the people before deciding upon the complexion of the next government.

Prince Saionji, the Genro (Japan's senior elder statesman), escaped assassination because he heard that a column of troops was marching to his Okitsu villa to kill him.

He fled to Shidzuoka.

The column moving against him never reached Okitsu.

It turned back to Tokyo, either on receipt of news of Prince Saionji's flight, or upon learning that the alarm had been sounded by the crackling of pistols and the rattle of machine guns in Tokyo.

Both before and after proclamation of martial law I motored throughout Tokyo and found no symptoms of disorders.

As far as we know, there were no actual eye-witnesses to the killings other than members of the victims' families and the participants.

The censorship appears to be easing up, but much "copy" remains untransmitted or "killed" by the censors, who imposed drastic regulations early Wednesday morning.

After the army command established that no other units than the Third Regiment of the First Division were involved, they brought in reinforcements from adjacent garrisons. Trucks laden with troops rumbled into the city. The soldiers surrounded the buildings which the rebels had occupied.

There was no fighting.

The rebels held their ground while the seemingly endless negotiations for a compromise went on.

The rebels, in their demands, said the army and the people must be a cohesive unit surrounding the throne.

We do not know whether there will be a council of state.

The Emperor and his advisers are to discuss that today.

It may be necessary to form a council of state in the interim—inevitable before the true sentiment of the country as a whole is determined.

The rebels said the people have been slipping away from the true spirit of Japan.

They demanded that there be a change in the law of the state. They had said they themselves would institute a new law of the state.

The name of Gen. Sadao Araki, former minister of war, and once considered a leading spokesman of the military extremists, was not mentioned prominently in talk of a head for the new government—whatever it may be.

That of Gen. Jnzaburo Mazaki is mentioned repeatedly. Mazaki has been considered a leading spokesman of Right-Wing elements in the army's higher command. He is a member of the supreme war council.

There was much talk of a possible council of state as a "transition government."

Prince Chichibu, first younger brother of the Emperor; Prince Higashi-Kuni, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, who visited the United States two years ago, and Prince Nashimoto, all were mentioned as likely representatives of the imperial family on such a council.

The army probably would be represented by Gens. Arkai and Mazaki. Parliamentary groups would be represented by heads of the Minseito and Seiyukai groups.

All the high army generals were in continuous conference at the army club on Kudan hill near the shrine of Japan's "Unknown Soldier."

Members of the temporary cabinet were housed in one of the buildings in the Imperial Palace compound—at the constant call of the Emperor.

One foreigner was known to have been arrested by military police. He is Gerald Samson, who has described himself here as a "British writer." He was picked up by gendarmes and hurried away "for questioning." Nature of the charges could not be learned. Samson has described himself here as a "wanderer." He said he recently was in the South Sea Islands and before that, in Brazil and Argentina.

About 30 soldiers were guarding the United States Embassy.

Police disappeared from the streets the moment the army took over control. None has been seen for 24 hours.

Newspapers still were appearing. The Japan Advertiser, American daily, owned by B. W. Fleisher, of Philadelphia, published a limited account of the revolt this morning. Wilfrid Fleisher editor, said no especial restrictions had been placed on the newspaper, and that "we are publishing what news we can get."

Frank H. Hedges, of Springfield, Mo., acting editor of the Japan Times, Japanese-owned English language newspaper, said his paper also was publishing what information was available.

United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew remained constantly in his office, but was able to obtain little information other than that in the brief official communiques. He said none of the Embassy personnel had been molested and that he saw no reason to fear the Americans will be endangered.

Railway service was continuing normally; most banks were open and business, except for the stock exchange, was proceeding in nearly normal fashion.

MAYBE YOU'RE still trying to make up your mind which type of whiskey you're going to make your choice—whether it's to be straight whiskey that's unblended; whiskey blended with neutral spirits; or a blend of straight whiskies and nothing but straight whiskies.

We believe that one taste of Four Roses will decide the whole question for you—and decide it in favor of the third type of whiskey. For Four Roses is not only a blend of straight whiskies—it is a blend of the finest American straight whiskies—every drop made in the United States! And that means the best whiskey you can buy, regardless of age or price.

That's a big statement. But it's backed by Frankfort's 70 years of distilling experience—70 years of producing nothing but the finest kind of American whiskey.

And it's backed, too, by simple logic. Every straight whiskey possesses some outstanding quality—something extra in the direction of flavor, or aroma, or body. So, when we blend several of these whiskies in the special way the years have taught us, we bring out the best virtues of each separate whiskey—we combine in one great liquor all the qualities a whiskey-lover looks for.

Whiskey connoisseurs know this. And other men are learning it mighty fast. The best whiskey is a blend of all straight, all American whiskies—and its name is Four Roses!

England Plans Series of 2-Way Naval Treaties

World Limitation Is Aim; Follows London Parley Deadlock.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 27.—Great Britain indicated to naval conference quarters tonight she intends to propose a new plan to obtain a world naval limitation treaty through bi-lateral negotiations with other powers.

The move followed an announcement that the Italians are not prepared to sign a four-power treaty. The Rome delegation so advised the British government today.

First discussions under the new plan will be with the Americans and Germans, if they accept the idea. Russia would probably be next approached, with Japan, France and Italy following.

The plan would be for each power to negotiate separately with the British and initial a draft treaty providing for the annual exchange of information on building programs and limitation of the sizes and types of ships.

The present four-power conference would be adjourned until near the end of the year. If all bi-lateral negotiations are completed by then, all powers would meet here to sign the treaty they had initialed. The draft treaty would not be effective until the treaty is signed.

The treaty would be effective January 1, 1937, for probably six years and would replace the existing Washington and London treaties, expiring in December.

Battleships would be limited to a maximum of 35,000 tons and 14-inch guns. Limitations for each type of ship would follow the outline of a treaty under discussion by the present conference. There would be no restrictions on the number of ships of each type that could be built, except perhaps each power would be allowed to build only two or three new battleships.

The British apparently feel that negotiations with the Americans and Germans could be completed in a week or so because both have intimated approval of the treaty under discussion by the four-power conference.

Then Russia would be invited, after which there would be an attempt to get the French, Italians and Japanese to negotiate, although the objections of these three to the proposed limitations are so strong that many quarters feel it would be difficult to get them to initial a treaty.

The French discussed battleship limitation again with the Americans today and seemed determined to continue to oppose a 35,000-ton maximum unless it is agreed to reduce the size after 1940, which would not be acceptable to the Americans.

$1,516,479 Bond Bid Accepted by Danville

Danville, Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—A joint bid of $1,516,479 by three Chicago firms on Danville PWA bonds, totaling $1,513,000, was accepted last night by the Danville city council.

The city accepted an alternate bid by the syndicate on 3¼ per cent bonds, instead of on 4 per cent bonds, as advertised, but agreed that, if the attorneys found this out of order, the syndicate's primary bid of $1,631,467 should be accepted. This would allow a premium of $118,000.

Canadian Aid-de-Camp Visits Naval Academy

Britons Assail Arms Program To Cost Billion

Baldwin Plans 3-Year Project; Will Name Defense Minister.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 27.—Angry accusations were hurled through both the House of Commons and the House of Lords in bitter defense debate today, following Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's announcement that Great Britain's rearmament program will be launched with the publication of a white paper on March 5.

Baldwin disclosed that a new cabinet minister will be named to become his deputy to co-ordinate defense plans.

The announcements, following almost daily meetings of a cabinet committee for two months, generally were approved in government quarters, but provided fuel for vigorous opposition speeches. Baldwin declined to name the new minister, who was described in the House of Lords by Baron Strabolgi, noted naval critic, as on "who would have no real power, but would be a sort of shadow of the prime minister—a camouflage."

The white paper is expected to contain a review of the reasons leading to the conclusion that defenses must be strengthened and to give the details of steps proposed to be taken in the next three to five years.

The cost of the program, variously estimated at between £200,000,000 (about $1,000,000,000) and £300,000,000, also may be announced, after which parliament debates the Army, Navy and Air Force estimates.

A. Ammon, opposing the estimates, quoted Dr. Ivor Jones, of Chicago, as saying he had discovered a new poison gas "likely to destroy armies as a man might snuff out a candle."

The spreading of plagues by bacteria is considered as a possible essential of any future war," said Ammon.

Woodberry Forest Alumni Meet Tuesday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., Feb. 27.—Former students of Woodberry Forest School at the University of Virginia and in Charlottesville will meet Tuesday night at Madison Hall to form an alumni chapter. It is estimated that 85 alumni of the school live in the vicinity of Charlottesville or are attending the university.

Leonard Dick, director of athletics at Woodberry Forest, will assist in the organization of the chapter. Officers will be elected and plans will be discussed for a banquet in April in honor of J. Carter Walker, the school's headmaster.

Brittingham Seeking Re-election as Mayor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philippi, W. Va., Feb. 27.—Harry F. Brittingham, who is serving the unexpired term of the late W. A. Mason as Mayor of the city, will be a candidate for re-election to that office, it was announced today.

A mass meeting of citizens will be held in the courthouse Friday, evening, March 6, to select candidates for Mayor, councilman-at-large, a councilman from each of four wards, and a city clerk.

The regular municipal election will be held March 10, and those elected will assume the duties of their respective offices April 6.

Light Restored To Texas Cities In Power Strike

Union Disclaims Sabotage Blame as Inquiry Is Started.

By the Associated Press.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 27.—Power from the picketed plants of the El Paso Electric Co. lighted this city and 26 surrounding communities in New Mexico and Texas again tonight after sudden stoppage by a strike early today.

While the 150,000 inhabitants of the affected area kept a worried eye on light switches, a court of inquiry sat in hearings on company charges of sabotage.

Limited service was restored to El Paso's business district and hospitals six hours after the city and environs were plunged into darkness without warning at 3:53 a. m.

The court of inquiry was set up by Justice of the Peace M. V. Ward, after the company filed charges that "unidentified persons" damaged power equipment preventing earlier rehabilitation of service.

N. C. Clay, local union president, denied union men were responsible for any plant damage.

"If any damage was done," he said, "it was done by non-union and unskilled help brought in to break the strike."

From the Department of Labor in Washington came the report Joseph S. Myers, conciliator, had been ordered to El Paso. Arthur Horn, State labor commission deputy here, sent a report to F. E. Nichols, the State commissioner. Nichols said he would fly here to investigate.

The shutdown caused most inconvenience in hospitals, where nurses administered to their patients by candlelight or flashlight.

At one hospital a baby girl was born by candlelight while the worried father paced an unlighted corridor.

Akron Factions Contacted.

Akron, Ohio, February 27 (AP).—Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady conferred separately today with Paul W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., and non-striking employes.

Pickets remained at entrances to Goodyear property during the tenth day of a strike affecting more than 14,000 workers.

McGrady declined to comment other than to observe Litchfield received him "very courteously."

In a published appeal to Akron citizens, the company announced "pay roll revenues of close to $100,000 a day are forcibly cut off from the business life stream of this community."

A Balanced Tax Program.

President Roosevelt's veto of the $50,000,000 seed loan bill gave him another opportunity to rebuke Congress for its bad habit of approving new expenditures without providing new revenues to cover them. He reiterated the advice contained in his recent budget message, strongly urging that additional taxes be voted to cover all unbudgeted charges.

Since then Congress has passed the bonus measure over the President's veto without even suggesting how it shall be financed, while Federal revenues have been severely cut by the Supreme Court's invalidation of the processing taxes. As a result between $2,000,000,000 and $3,000,000,000 will be added next year to the huge deficit anticipated on relief account. Furthermore, the deficit for the current fiscal year will be increased through loss of receipts from processing taxes.

Although the President may disclaim direct responsibility for these untoward developments, it is, nevertheless, his duty under the budget law to recommend ways and means of financing the deficit. Congressional inaction emphasizes the importance of executive initiative in bringing forward a comprehensive and well-balanced tax program without delay. Mere substitutes for the invalidated processing taxes will not suffice. Additional revenue is required, at least enough to cover interest and amortization charges upon funds borrowed to redeem bonus bonds. And beyond that it is essential that the deficit attributable to relief outlays should be cut. That can be done only through a combination of heavy taxation and drastic economy.

A courageous taxing policy would assist budgetary balance in two ways: it would add to revenues and prepare the way for retrenchment by making the public conscious that it has to pay for what the Government spends. That realization would be brought home with especial force if taxes were levied upon the income of the average citizen of limited means. Direct taxes of this sort would have an educational value not measured by the actual amount of revenue received. Moreover, they would offset the rapidly growing burdens of the numerous State and Federal excise taxes now levied upon business. To obtain adequate revenues, the Federal Government may be forced to resort to some kind of general sales taxation. But if such taxes should be relied upon exclusively to supply new revenue, they would have a serious retarding effect upon business and in the end defeat their own purpose.

The only ultimate solution of our budgetary difficulties, of course, lies in a reduction of expenditures. Meantime, however, the people must be taught that budgets have to be balanced if we are to escape national bankruptcy.

After Nine Years.

Yesterday's article by The Post reporter assigned to study the problem of Washington's low health rating reviewed a survey of the city made in 1927 by the United States Public Health Service. After nine years, during which the population of the District has increased enormously, the pessimistic conclusion reached by the Federal surgeon in charge of the survey still applies: "The health service now provided the most important municipality of the Nation is decidedly inadequate and ineffective . . . "

The chief reason for this unhappy state of affairs is well enough known. The community is at the mercy of legislators only mildly interested in its affairs. A request for public health funds, even when the budget is balanced and the outlay has been approved by the local Commissioners, must run the gamut of the Federal Budget Bureau, the two District sub-committees on appropriations, the two full appropriations committees and finally the two houses of Congress. The budgetary cuts received in this process have been cruelly deep.

It is with real gratitude that the community in general, and the victims of uncontrolled disease in particular, note the current prospects for better treatment. The mass protests of the District medical fraternity, seconded by many civic organizations of the city, have succeeded at last in enlisting the support of various members of the House committee. As for the Senate, Chairman Thomas of the sub-committee on appropriations, and Dr. Copeland, of New York, have both indicated that they will do their best to obtain the requested increase in funds. And now Senator Capper, once chairman and now ranking minority member of the District Committee, has added his support to the drive.

The fight is not yet won, but steady gains are being made every day. It would be extremely difficult for Congress again to ignore this vital community need, for the voice of the demagogues is no longer predominant.

On Reclaiming Slums.

Construction of a group of low-rental houses in London Court, as the first re-housing project of the Alley Dwelling Authority, will be a significant event for Washington. Relatively speaking, this development will be very small. But it tends to round out the program of the A. D. A. and to bring that organization into the limelight as one of the very few agencies in the United States that are scientifically attacking the problem of slum reclamation.

The systematic and intelligent manner in which John Ihlder and his organization are proceeding to wipe out Washington's alley slums cannot be too emphatically commended. Demolition of insanitary and unsightly hovels is too often confused in the minds of officials as well as the public with the very different problem of building decent dwellings for families with very low incomes. From the beginning Mr. Ihlder has avoided that mistake. His aim is "to convert community liabilities into community assets." Obviously that could not be done by building new houses on land that is suitable only for commercial purposes.

Most of the alley property already cleared is being used for the erection of garages or as parking lots. No doubt a large part of the areas yet to be reclaimed will be devoted to this purpose, for automobile storage facilities have been grossly neglected in the past. Some of the alleys may well serve as playgrounds. Still other cleared areas will likely be taken over by the Government for addition to Federal building sites. In effect, therefore, the Alley Dwelling Authority is engaged in urban reclamation akin to city planning. Its work is coordinated with that of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Board of Education and various branches of the Federal and local governments.

The rehousing of alley dwellers is an important but none the less incidental part of this larger program. A few of these families may find quarters in the Langston Terrace project proposed by the PWA. A considerable number already have moved to street houses. But the supply of suitable low-rent dwellings is much smaller than the demand. In these circumstances the A. D. A. has a clear responsibility to provide houses for the dispossessed families who cannot be cared for otherwise. The fact that it intends to discharge that obligation by developing genuine low-cost projects should further strengthen public confidence in the soundness of its endeavors.

It is strange that the Congress which authorized this eminently sound approach to the slum problem in the Capital City also inaugurated a national slum replacement program on a completely different basis. The local program is moving forward slowly, as such undertakings must necessarily proceed, but with every prospect of lasting achievement. The national program has encountered numerous difficulties, some of them apparently insoluble.

Fortunately, discussion of slum reclamation and low-rental housing is again swinging to the basis of community endeavor, aided by the Government. In working out a new program the policies of the Alley Dwelling Authority may well serve as a model for community rehabilitation as opposed to the haphazard rebuilding of blighted residential areas.

The Masters' Voices.

As one who has played the major role in the business of equipping 21,500,000 American homes with radios, Owen D. Young commands special attention when he pleads for temperance of language in political broadcasts. More than most of us, this leading radio executive is aware of implications in the fact that a potential audience of 78,000,000 persons can be reached through a single microphone today and that it is not unusual for 20,000,000 listeners to tune in on one program broadcast over a Nation-wide hook-up.

Once more, then, the question of freedom of the air is raised. The refusal some weeks ago of the two major broadcasting companies to sell time for Republican skits designed to embarrass the Democrats focused momentary attention on the new problem. More recently, the unanimous decision of the Supreme Court in ruling against the Louisiana newspaper tax as a threat to freedom of the press by inference reminded the Nation of its need similarly to cherish freedom of the air. Somewhere between the Scylla of censorship and the Charybdis of unrestrained discourse lies the safe course for broadcasting in a democracy.

Comparison of the last Presidential campaign with elections held abroad at that time emphasizes the fortunate position of American broadcasting today. In Germany (then democratic) only President von Hindenburg and Chancellor Bruening were allowed on the air; Hitler, Duesterberg and Thaelmann—three contenders for leadership—were not allowed to broadcast. In France, Herriot was permitted to make only one speech over the government-controlled system, while Premier Tardieu spoke five times and members of his cabinet even more. In England, the nationalized British Broadcasting Company alloted time for accredited spokesmen of all groups represented in Parliament, but small minority groups were not allowed on the air.

Mr. Young fully appreciates the complete desirability of avoiding such restrictions and of maintaining the liberalism of the American system. Accordingly, he begs "the great masters of our political machine" to forestall any invitations to restriction by doing their utmost to avoid "the intemperance of emotion and prejudice." The masters, he submits, set the fashions for broadcasting; let them, he urges, be alive to their "great responsibility"—the responsibility of shielding democracy from the gags of censorship which inevitably follow when self-restraint is forgotten.

The Railroad Outlook.

When the country was in the depths of depression it was impossible to determine to what extent the financial troubles of the railroads were due to general difficulties, and how far they resulted from permanent handicaps specific to the carriers. With a pronounced and protracted business upturn, it is becoming easier to gauge the prospects of a lasting recovery for the railway industry itself.

Statistics of gross and net earnings for the past year tell a story that is encouraging because of the gains recorded since the low point of the depression, but far from reassuring if compared with the returns required to put the roads on a reasonably prosperous footing. Gross earnings in 1935, for instance, were more than 5 per cent higher than in 1934, but even so were not much more than half the figure for 1929. Net earnings failed to rise correspondingly because larger revenues were offset in part by the forced restoration of higher wage rates and by increased costs of materials and supplies. Despite the improvement recorded, 26 roads operated at a loss last year, while over 25 per cent of all railway mileage remained in bankruptcy or receivership.

At no time in the last 15 years have the carriers as a whole averaged as much as 5 per cent on their property investment and during the past four years the return has been below 2 per cent. Under the circumstances, there is small reason to suppose that even a sustained business recovery could of itself restore bankrupt roads to solvency and raise earnings to the point of yielding reasonable returns on invested capital.

The position is difficult, yet not as desperate from the point of view of private ownership as some pessimists believe. In the first place, the earnings records of the past year underestimate the extent of recent progress. The major improvement came during the last four months of 1935, when monthly increases in net earnings ranged from 12 per cent to 38 per cent.

Not only have earnings been rising lately at a rapid rate, but the stronger roads are also being benefited by reductions of fixed charges through refunding operations. The weaker systems will be assisted by reorganizations, which also permit of a scaling of fixed charges. Another boon for the roads is the approach of Federal regulation of motor carriers, providing much-needed protection against unfair competition.

With all these aids, however, the railways as a whole remain under the necessity of cutting their costs drastically, both to make present operations more profitable and to attract new business by giving better and cheaper service. In a number of respects substantial savings seem obtainable, despite the legal handicaps imposed upon the carriers.

Either through voluntary action (greatly to be preferred) or by exercise of governmental authority, operating wastes must be eliminated, and fixed charges and labor costs must be kept to levels justified by earning capacity. Business improvement can then be counted upon to do its full share in rehabilitating the roads and saving them from Government ownership. But private managements must seize every opportunity to increase income and reduce outgo. A return of general prosperity would not automatically rescue the carriers from financial distress.

Petition Permitted.

It has been adjudged no sin for Government employes to work for an improved personnel in the civil service. For some time the National League of Women Voters has been circulating petitions asking political parties to pledge themselves to abolition of the spoils system. Efforts to induce Federal workers to sign this simple request, however, have failed for fear that such action might bring discrimination.

Now, by formal opinion of the chief examiner of the Civil Service Commission, these fears are partially dissipated. No violation of the civil service rules or political activity regulations is found in indorsement of a plea that personnel officers "find the man for the job, not the job for the man." This is as it should be. To expect efficiency from an organization staffed by political obligation is farce enough. To forbid even an expression of hope for improvement from within would be a reduction to absurdity.

It is reported that Miami will give to the needy the revenue received from slot machines. This seems to be the first attempt to take care of the destitute by setting up a revolving fund.

If you will leave alcohol alone you will never become a drunkard.—Albert Edward Wiggam. Simple enough.

"You Can't Arrest Me."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before you finish your very well-worth-while series, "You Can't Arrest Me," I wish you would give at least one article, "You Must Not Arrest Me." I am referring to another class of citizens who are more or less scornful to traffic regulations and who have been granted certain deliberate immunities by the Traffic Bureau.

I am referring to the practice of the Traffic Bureau of giving certain favored citizens low license plates, usually those citizens supposed to have influence. I do not have to tell you that low license plates are commonly accepted by the police as a notice to "lay off." The Traffic Director does admit that he favors certain citizens with "favorite numbers" and he points out that a comparative small number of these persons have warrants issued against them. The interpretation of this fact seems to be obviously that the police "lay off."

JOHN P. STORY, JR.
Washington, Feb. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You are to be commended, your paper is to be congratulated, and all Washington should be thankful that "You Can't Arrest Me" is getting results!

The Post has embarked on a crusade that will do more toward restoring respect for law and order than anything attempted in the past. Don't let it lose its fire and inspiration and don't let the political blowhards and buck-passers coerce or intimidate you into any form of passivity or quiescence. Stay with it!

But may I add a suggestion? While Washington motorists may resent the un-American and unsportsmanlike immunity behind which some Congressmen repeatedly retreat, our disgust is even greater for the tactics of our local "law and order boys." It has reached the point when it becomes front page news when anyone has a good word for a local cop. Until this situation is changed, local respect for, and co-operation with, the Metropolitan Police will remain at a minimum.

How about forming a Washingtonians' Protective Association for the purpose of combating the lawlessness of our law enforcers and making Americans out of our Congressmen? Any motorist can point out countless abuses of the traffic code which would be ended immediately by the application of normal intelligence with the proper authority behind it. A SUBSCRIBER.

Improved Social Welfare.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Attorney Harlan Wood, through your forum, resented my statement that many of the leading officials and white residents of the town do not believe Edwards was alone in the killing of Truman Brush last August. He also indicates that I was unaware of the interest and knowledge of the case possessed by certain colored welfare organizations and colored lawyers.

As a matter of fact, I was fully aware of all the angles of the case. There was no implication in my article that the race of Edwards had anything to do with the conduct of the trial. Throughout northern Virginia since the famous Crawford trial, and the liberal decisions of the Supreme Court in re Negro jury service, a most pronounced fairness before the court has been shown Negro defendants when they are guilty of most revolting crimes.

The opinion of the trial judge, of Mr. Wood, and others, that Edwards" was mentally unsound, coupled with my knowledge of the conditions of social life in rural Virginia, which prevent discovery of the social defectives until too late, were real reasons for my article. I still insist that social workers imbued with the spirit of Christianity, and trained, are needed to establish relationships between racial or low socio-economic and better privileged groups to the end that social betterment for all groups results.

Here in Washington recently the Federation of Churches has broken down some restrictive barriers of race in order to work unitedly for a better citizenry through church activity. The Community Chest social agencies are extending leadership and fellowship activities to all groups more than ever before. The removal of the blinders of racial prejudices, a knowledge and understanding of the differences of racial groups, and an active belief in the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of all men as objectives in the training of teachers, preachers, health workers, and other social workers account to some extent for the improved welfare services in Washington.

"Latest Fumble."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the New Deal is back of the malice ousting of Gen. Hagood, it has shown itself up—again—in rather pitiful colors. Proof is given, if more proof is needed, that the Deal can't take it. Beyond that, the best that may be said is that it can never be convicted of intelligence.

It was evident that discipline against one not subservient to the Deal thumbscrew and its wierd code of government would follow the general's freedom of speech. He should have recognized this "freedom" is reserved for the sole use of brain trusters injected into the councils on a wholesale scale to remake the universe.

Gen. Hagood's sharp criticisms of a hybrid branch of the wastral "recovery" orgy are shared by increasing millions of fellow citizens. Though mild compared with the comments of Gen. Dawes before a committee, Dawes saved his blasts till after separation from the military service.

Here is a case where the Deal might show the caliber claimed for it by radio debaters. Otherwise it will find the present action a political boomerang and a popular mistake, which members of Congress are to be commended for attempting—though perhaps unsuccessfully—to rectify.

It is just another in the long chain of minor events the "third party" will have to answer for next November—if blame for this latest fumble rests at its door.

FHA In Virginia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to my letter dated February 24 and printed in The Post of February 26 in reply to Edward C. Kriz, I wish to state that no reference was intended to the project in Arlington County, Va., known as Aurora Hills and sponsored by Mr. Henry C. Morris.

From the letter of Mr. Kriz I received the impression that he was referring to another tract of land, which has not been under consideration by the Federal Housing Administration for a large scale housing project. I now learn that Mr. Kriz apparently was referring to the Aurora Hills project, and I wish to correct any misapprehension which may have resulted from my letter of a few days ago.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article, "Ignorance and Lack of Funds Held Menace to City Health," published in The Post on February 13, is worthy of comment.

You are to be commended not only on your public-spirited attitude, but on your courage in presenting the facts.

Gen. Hagood's Criticisms.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Following the recent order that Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood be relieved of his command for criticism of expenditure of WPA funds, one wonders if there is not some truth to the charge that the Roosevelt Administration inclines toward terrorism in an effort to suppress adverse discussion concerning its use of public funds. Certainly the order indicates that the Administration does not wish to face the truth, nor does it want constructive advice from those Government officials who are in a position to suggest more judicious methods of spending.

While no one questions the right of the President, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, to discipline his subordinate officers, it is to be expected that he consider suggestions of high ranking officers, especially when those suggestions are related to affairs in which those officers are vitally interested. So far, the general's charges have not been denied by the Administration, but instead, an evident truth has been admitted by an order which relieves the general "until further notice."

Discussion of administrative policy by both the citizen and public figure in the press and meeting house has been largely responsible for the splendid growth of democratic government in the United States, but the recent order suggests the unwanted arrogance of a dictatorship. It demands a thorough explanation. GEORGE WILLIAM.

Affairs In Puerto Rico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like other Latins, the Puerto Ricans are intensely proud of their racial stock, "la raza." Nevertheless a feeling of inferiority is apt to develop when face to face with an American who parades his purported superiority. If not sagaciously toned down the submissiveness engendered leads eventually to hatred. At best it is not easy for the Anglo-Saxon to understand the Latin temperament, although a sort of "modus vivendi" has been grafted onto the old customs still strong in the hearts of the Puerto Ricans.

That the island has gained materially in many ways from the American form of government during the past 38 years is strikingly apparent when a comparison is made between Puerto Rico and other Caribbean islands. With a decreasing death rate due to sanitation and other health measures, the ratio of population has reached the tremendous density of about 375 to the square mile. As a result of this condition the economy of the island, which was the object of a study by the Brookings Institution a few years ago, no longer serves to support the fast increasing number of inhabitants.

The situation confronting those who will be called upon to seek remedial measures is two-fold, political and economic. The underlying causes more than the assassination of Col. Riggs, which I am sure all fair-minded Puerto Ricans deplore, should be thoroughly aired.

Differs With Mr. Sullivan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are a great many citizens in Washington who do not belong to the Federation of Civic Associations and who do not subscribe to the views of Mr. George E. Sullivan.

I object to the way in which Mr. Sullivan's small committee demands that certain textbooks and magazines be thrown out of our public schools because, in their personal opinions, the books and magazines are "subversive." As a matter of fact, I have been curious enough to make my own investigation of some of the texts and periodicals Mr. Sullivan calls "communistic," and I strongly disagree with him.

And I believe that, if a count were taken, there would be a vast number of others who feel that our Washington high school teachers are as competent as ourselves to choose the materials that will best fit into the high school courses.

The Post Impressionist

Mirror Up To Nature.

Post Office, Friday.

"DO you believe that the actor should feel the emotions he portrays—or do you believe that he shouldn't?"

He baits his trap with pretty praises. He pretends to have been delighted with what we recently wrote about George M. Cohan and the art of "being natural" on the stage.

"You are quite correct," says this correspondent, "in your complaint that too many players are artificial because 'they don't know the characters, don't know the average and, above all, don't know actual life.' That is a far too frequent ignorance. It is one reason why so few actors can even 'read their lines' properly—and right you are again in citing Joseph Jefferson as a shining example to the contrary and a pattern too rarely followed. He always practiced what he preached:

"'The actor should speak his lines'—I quote from memory, but here's the gist of it—'as though the thought contained in the words were his own and he was uttering it for the first time.'

"To be able to do this night after night is indeed art!

"In one of your articles published several months ago, you said something about Edwin Booth 'singing' his lines. That he didn't do; he just used the cadence indispensable in interpretations of Shakespeare. And, if you want to realize how few interpreters can use it, you have only to listen to some of the current attempts over the radio. A few evenings ago I tried to listen in while a well-known member of the Academy of the Motion Picture Arts and Sciences recited Othello's apology and defense; I stood it for about 20 lines, then simply had to shut it off.

"I often wonder, and wish I knew, how Garrick, Edmund Kean, John Philip Kemble and so many other of the great ones read their lines. Did they really rant? Booth did not. He had that tragic power which rendered ranting unnecessary—always expressed 'the thought contained in the words.' There was no surface acting in Booth.

"On the other hand there is so little else among our contemporaries that the genuine art 'shines like a good deed in a naughty world.' Did you ever see Joseph Haworth? I knew him well; he was a case in point. He could do 'Armand' in 'Camille' one night, 'Macbeth' the next, and be wonderful in both. He was with Modjeska then. When he played 'Cassius' to Mansfield's 'Brutus,' he 'stole the show.'

"But to turn to the broader aspects of 'naturalness' in the theater. You put it with excellent terseness when you say of Cohan that 'he is so "natural" because he is so much an artist.' I was amazed when I first discovered, among my fellow players, the prevalence of the reverse—but I'll let you off with one instance.

"I was directing a piece for Arthur Hopkins. A good-looking young fellow had been engaged to play a part that had previously been played by Cyril Young—and you know how 'natural,' how spontaneous Young can seem to be. Well, this young chap was simply doing nothing with the role. I reported to the office, but was told to teach him. I tried teaching and he informed me:

"'Why, all my friends tell me that my naturalness is my chief charm!'

"I knew then that he was hopeless.

"The upshot? When Hopkins attended the final rehearsal on Saturday night and heard the young man speak about five lines, Arthur called the rehearsal off—and I had to chase over to the Lambs Club and find another actor to open in the role on Monday night.

"No, it isn't easy to be easy on the stage!"

So far, so good. But then the trap is sprung.

"What, however," concludes our wily theatrical correspondent, "do you consider the recipe for ease, for that apparent spontaneity which, you imply, best conveys the sense of reality? Do you believe that the actor should feel the emotions he portrays—or do you believe that he shouldn't?"

It's a question, as this correspondent must well know, as old as acting. And, whatever way you answer it, you're courting controversy.

If we were going in for a reply, we might say:

Our answer is "Yes"—a little of both. The actor should feel the emotion he portrays—and shouldn't. One half of him ought to stand aloof, telling the other half what it ought to do; and the other half ought to obey so thoroughly that it believes itself to be the character it is thus portraying.

There's the reply we might make. However, we shan't make it. We shan't make any reply at all.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 27.

THE most pathetic victims of Adolf Hitler's slow massacre of the Jews in Germany are the children of the Jews who are too young to know what it is all about. These children are subjected to a method of torture far worse than the baby killing which was charged against the German infantry in the early days of the great war in cartoons depicting little bodies wriggling on the bayonets of the marching armies.

It finally was shown that the German soldier Michael, as he was called at home, was the soul of kindness who often shared his rations with the waifs behind the Belgian lines, and reasonable people on the allied side of the fight ultimately admitted that the charge was false.

But it will be impossible for the Nazi Germans of the present time to deny the atrocities which are being perpetrated on the children of the Jews under the orders of Adolf Hitler as a policy of the German government today.

HITLER'S torture of the Jewish children is even more ingenious, however, for he has invented a way to convert the period of childhood into a term of unrelieved sorrow, fear, dread and suffering. It is commonly accepted among the civilized peoples of the world that any man who would inflict suffering on a child wantonly or for the purpose of avenging some offense, real or imaginary, attributed to the child's parents, or for any other reason, is not quite right mentally and ought to be put away.

We had a case of that kind in New York recently—an old man who tortured and killed a little girl for the pleasure it gave him, and public opinion pretty well agreed that he was insane. But even in that case the suffering of the little girl was of short duration. Then she was dead. Hitler's little victims, however, are not allowed to die. They have no such luck. Hitler keeps them alive, and they suffer day after horrible day at the hands of a nation as a matter of national policy.

The German child who is a Jew is compelled to listen to the most unspeakable vilification of his parents, and the child's first attempts at spelling out public notices on the billboard will inform him that he is not a human being, like other children, but a beast whose parents were not human beings, either, but loathsome animals.

• • • •

IF the child lives in a country town where there are not sufficient Jewish children to warrant the establishment of a ghetto school in which to segregate little Jews, then the torture of the victim is even more artistic. In that case the child may be compelled to sit in the classroom and pay attention while the teacher explains that little Isadore or Rosie is a vile creature, a species of vermin and a menace to the German nation. If the teacher so desires the Jewish child may be dismissed from the room during the lecture, in which case the Aryan children, with characteristic cruelty of children, plus the sadistic delight in the infliction of pain which is now being fostered in young Nazis, will catch the young Jew after class and tell Isadore or Rosie what the teacher said.

If the radio is turned on in the home of a Jewish family the children will hear an orator somewhere in Berlin or Munich explaining that their parents are a species of beast and that they are little beasts themselves.

A lone Jewish child in a small community must play alone, for the true Nazi children, of course, will not admit him to their company, and a Gentile child with pity in its heart would be afraid to offer the victim any sympathy. They might both be beaten up.

And then, of course, it is fair sport for the Nazi children to kick and beat and throw rocks at the little Jews, because that is preliminary training for one of the highest functions of Nazi citizenship in days to come.

• • • •

ALL children have a trusting attitude toward grown people, and a harsh word may leave an ineffaceable scar on the soul of the young one. The souls of the children of the Jews in Germany will be cross-hacked with a thousand cuts, for they will never know anything in childhood but insults to themselves and foulest aspersions on the only adults to whom they can turn for comfort—their parents and other relatives.

It is absolutely certain that their childhood, the few hours of innocence which are given to all of us and which civilized people try to invest with beauty and joy, has been destroyed by a man with a mustache (adopted from the make-up of a famous comedian) who has been seriously nominated by some of his followers not for King, not merely for ruler, but for God the Redeemer of the German race. It would be a mistake to call him a babykiller. You can't torture a dead child.

Son of Rabbi to Speak On Soviet Journeys

James Waterman Wise, son of Rabbi Stephen B. Wise, noted liberal, will speak on his recent journeys through Soviet at Typographical Temple, 423 G street northwest, next Sunday at 8 p. m. Former Senator Smith W. Brookhart will preside.

Wise has made intensive investigations of dictatorships and suppression of civil rights. He has written a volume entitled "Swastika, the Nazi Terror," which was published in 1933. Two years later he was co-editor of "Naziism, an Assault on Civilization."

North China "Autonomy"

Japanese "Lawrence" Directs Revolts In Provinces.

The assassination of Japan's Premier and other high civilian officials reveals the determination of the military to proceed with the conquest of China at any cost and regardless of any opposition, foreign or domestic. Because of the tremendous international significance of this aggressive policy The Post recently requested its Shanghai correspondent to prepare a series of articles analyzing the rapidly developing tension between Japan, China and Russia. The second of these articles, on the disaffection of five northern Chinese provinces, appears below.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Shanghai.

TWO stocky, placid Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, chief of the Japanese Kwantung Army's secret service, must go the laurels for the autonomy movement in North China. Without international breast-beating and the roar of cannons which accompanied the Manchurian interlude of 1931, in which he also played a significant role, Maj. Gen. Doihara has in five months changed the entire political set-up in North China, linking the northern provinces to Japan with seemingly unbreakable bonds.

All this he accomplished without the loss of a single soldier, and apparently without violating the letter of a single international treaty. Skilfully staged and timed displays of power along the Great Wall, a profound knowledge of Chinese conditions and warlords, and the comforting knowledge that the Kwantung army was always prepared for any emergency, enabled the "Lawrence of Manchuria" to exact all desired concessions from Chinese generals.

The first intimation of Maj. Gen. Doihara's plan to change the map of China came on September 24 from one of his close collaborators, Maj. Gen. Tada, commander of the Japanese forces in North China. In a pamphlet elucidating the army's views on Sino-Japanese relations, the general counseled the creation of a new political organization in the north, politically and economically independent of the Nanking government.

• • • •

"IT is no exaggeration," the pamphlet said, "to state that Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and his associates may be regarded as the common enemy of our empire and the Chinese masses, as well as of humanity, inasmuch as they not only have failed to realize the fact that China cannot exist without Japan, but have always been absorbed in feathering their own nests by exploiting the Chinese masses.

"Indeed, the salvation of the Chinese masses cannot be left to them. And the masses • • • are so badly in need of salvation that unless proper steps are taken at an early date, they may be thrown into an irremediable plight • • • This is the greatest of the roots of calamity to peace in the Orient and as such constitutes a matter for profound regret to both the Japanese and the Chinese peoples.

"From this point of view," the pamphlet declared, "the basic principle of the policy of our empire toward China must be a thorough eradication of these roots of calamity and the salvation of the Chinese masses, with the ultimate aim of promoting coexistence and mutual prosperity between the two nations."

Maj. Gen. Tada's bombshell found its echo the same day in Tokyo, where a spokesman of the War Office told the Asahi that the "political machinery of North China has to be revised and firmly established. As the first step, a guiding hand has to be extended for the organization of a united self-governing body among the five provinces in North China."

On September 29, Maj. Gen. Doihara returned to Manchukuo from an extensive junket to the northern provinces during which he prepared the ground for the autonomy movement. He joined the chorus with: "I believe that the organization of an autonomous administration involving the five provinces of North China will greatly facilitate the restoration of peace and order."

• • • •

THE autonomy storm broke out on October 22, when farmers of Hsiangh district, 40 miles from Peiping, in the demilitarized zone, raised the flag of revolt, drove the magistrate out, and demanded autonomy and the abolition of new land surtaxes.

The uprising, according to a British editor in Tientsin, was organized by two importees from Peiping, ably assisted by Japanese civilians. The instigators found ready fuel in farmers, crushed under excessive taxes. Attempts to put down rebellion by force were immediately squelched by the Japanese army, which pointed out that the entry of Chinese troops into the demilitarized zone would form a violation of the Tangku Truce of 1933, and would thus menace Oriental peace. Similar revolts flared up in the next few days in several other magistracies, but succeeded in nothing but creating a general feeling of insecurity, which they were apparently meant to do.

The next act of the northern tragi-comedy began early in November, when Maj. Gen. Doihara returned to North China with an assignment to create a popular craving for autonomy. The first task was to find a leader who would be willing to "play ball" with the Kwantung army.

GEN. SUNG CHEH-YUAN
The Chinese Named By Japan To Boss North China.

Unfortunately for Maj. Gen. Doihara, the number of such men was very small. Gen. Shang Chen was tried out in November, found unsatisfactory and removed, together with his troops, out of North China Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, the famed "model governor" of Shansi, and Gen. Feng Yuh-siang, the "Christian general," who baptized his troops with a rubber hose, were snatched out of Japanese hands by the Chinese government, which lured them to Nanking in the nick of time.

Gen. Feng, glad to be out of the Taishan monastery, where he was writing poetry on a monthly remittance from one of his former followers, decided to settle in Nanking. Gen. Yen returned to his domain in the north. He will undoubtedly find it advisable to "cooperate" with the Kwantung Army, for the territory of his vassal, Governor Fu Tso-yi, of Suiyuan, in Inner Mongolia, has already been invaded by Manchoukuo troops.

Maj. Gen. Doihara's choice finally fell on Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan, who last summer was ignobly thrown out of Chahar by Japanese troops. Gen. Sung is a professional soldier, crude and uneducated. He was first tried out as the commander of the Peiping-Tientsin garrison. Later the Nanking government, apparently under Japanese pressure, appointed him to five highest concurrent posts in North China, making him the "boss" of Hopei and Chahar provinces.

Maj. Gen. Doihara's plans seemed to be carried out as scheduled, and on November 16 the Tokyo press was able to announce that four days later the five northern provinces would declare autonomy.

• • • •

ON November 20, however, Japanese Ambassador Ariyoshi held a four-hour interview with Gen. Chiang Kai-shek. What transpired at the meeting will probably be never known, but immediately secret Nanking orders were rushed north. Foreign obsbervers here believe that during the talk Mr. Ariyosai made it apparent that Tokyo would not support Maj. Gen. Doihara, either because of domestic opposition to new ventures in China or because of a belief that these may cement an Anglo-American alliance at the London naval disarmament conference.

The results of the Nanking instructions were startling. Gen. Shang Chen caught cold, preventing him from going to Peiping to see Maj. Gen. Doihara. A day or two later he fell victim to another malady—stove gas poisoning—which forced him to go to a hospital. Gen. Han Fu-chu, governor of Shantung, indefinitely postponed his trip north, because of a heavy fog, which made a flight to Peiping dangerous. Gen. Sung himself disappeared. Gen. Yen Hsi-shan left Shansi for Nanking, in exchange, according to the Japanese, for Ch. $6,000,000 and a monthly subsidy of $700,000.

Thus, Gen. Chiang's shrewd move destroyed overnight Maj. Gen. Doihara's brilliant scheme. Disgusted but not despairing, the latter left Peiping for Tientsin. Five days later he pulled a trump card out of his sleeve, with Mr. Yin Ju-keng's announcement of the formation of the East Hopei Autonomous Anti-Communist Council, its sovereignty extending over 22 magistracies, most of them in the demilitarized zone.

Mr. Yin studied in Japan and married a sister of a Japanese army major. He learned his political ABC's during the Shanghai Incident of 1932, as an interpreter at the Sino-Japanese conversations. Later he went north and was appointed, on Japanese recommendation, commissioner of a district in the demilitarized zone.

• • • •

THE selection of the zone for the demonstration of the popular yearning for autonomy was natural, for no Chinese troops may enter it under the terms of the Tangku Truce of 1933. Mr. Yin thus could not be dislodged from his lair without the consent of the Kwantung army. As he is apparently being groomed for bigger and better things in life, this consent will probably be withheld. Mr. Yin's domain extends from the Great Wall to the sea at Tangku, includes important salt beds and sections of major railroads, and has an annual revenue of Ch. $18,000,000. It can also, according to Mr. Yin, support an army of 100,000.

Mr. Yin's empire is extremely important. It has Japanese military advisers. Its propaganda is distributed in Peiping by Nipponese army planes. It has reportedly purchased a fleet of 17 Japanese bombers. It is now negotiating with Manchukuo for mutual recognition and the removal of tariff barriers.

The same day that Mr. Yin established his little empire, 2,000 "autonomists," each of whom was reportedly paid 40 cents for his trouble—the leaders received $1 a day—marched to the Tientsin police headquarters to demand its surrender. Some said the men were brought to the spot in Japanese military trucks. The police took things calmly until rowdy spectators commenced to manhandle the demonstrators and destroy their banners. The "autonomists" were corralled into the headquarters, supplied with police uniforms for disguise and let out by the back door. Street vendors did a roaring business selling autonomists' proclamations at 2 cents apiece.

• • • •

WHILE the Kwantung army demonstratively concentrated its forces at the Great Wall passes, the Nanking government, thoroughly alarmed, decided to act. Realizing that the inevitable could not be staved off, Nanking set itself to the task of saving its face and limiting the autonomy administration to two, instead of five, provinces. Gen. Ho Ying-chin, minister of war and a graduate of the Tokyo Military Academy, left Nanking for the north on November 30 to engage in a battle of wits with the Manchurian "Lawrence."

Maj. Gen. Doihara, said Reuter's correspondent in Peiping, has set for himself the task of winning for Japan "a vast slice of territory without military operations. Unquestionably he is fighting the hardest diplomatic battle of his uniformly successful career."

The first encounter, featured by innumerable pow-wows with Chinese generals and dramatic intercity telephone conversations between the two adversaries, ended in a compromise, thus giving Nanking a momentary moral victory. The Japanese took only two provinces.

The "compromise" Hopei-Chahar Political Council came into being on December 18 to the accompaniment of hoots and cat-calls from infuriated students. It was a cross between Doihara's independent government for five provinces and Ho's autonomous administration for two. Gen. Sung was appointed its head, and five of his subordinates were included among its 17 members. Others were largely recruited from the ranks of the Anfu Club, which hovered on the brink of life for the past 15 years, before Japanese injections revived it. Maj. Gen. Doihara was prominently mentioned as the council's highest adviser on military affairs.

The new administration was to enjoy autonomy in local matters, with the central government retaining responsibility for foreign, military and financial affairs. Its officials were also to be appointed by Nanking. These conditions were, however, tossed overboard a few days later, with the Council becoming in effect an independent regime, under Japanese aegis.

• • • •

EMBOLDENED by the complete absence of opposition to their ventures, the "brain-trusters" of the Tokyo War Ministry and the Kwantung army are now working on a new scheme, which would bring the benefits of independence to all five northern provinces. Maj. Gen. Doihara and lesser luminaries now openly assert that the Hopei-Chahar Council and Mr. Yin Ju-keng's government will be merged in the near future, "as soon as their objectives reach uniformity."

For a while, in the first week or two of this year, Maj. Gen. Doihara indicated that he would dispense with Gen. Sung, who, according to a military spokesman, is "so tinged with anti-Japanese and anti-Manchoukuo hues, it is impossible to reform him." Remembering the fate of his predecessors, Gen. Sung rushed to Maj. Gen. Doihara and Maj. Gen. Tada to kowtow. Doihara's enthusiasm was, however, restrained by Maj. Gen. Itagaki, assistant chief-of-staff of the Kwantung army, who was dispatched to North China post-haste to see that the former does not embark on new exploits.

Predications regarding North China are dangerous. The political current changes from day to day, and its channel is probably not known even to the Kwantung army. It is safe, however, to assume that all five provinces will soon form an autonomous, if not an independent, state, and that the region will in effect become an extension of Manchoukuo.

Brainy Fish

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Mr. Orsinger's Hobby.

I WENT over to the Department of Commerce aquarium yesterday to see the fish and found Mr. Orsinger much more interesting. The aquarium is in the smaller of the two rooms in the basement. The other room is the cafeteria. I just thought I would warn you in case you have never been there. It's very easy to make the mistake, especially at lunch time.

Mr. Fred Orsinger, a short, stocky white-haired and rather pugnacious looking gentleman, is Washington's No. 1 fish man. He runs the aquarium for the Department of Fisheries and is very much in love with his job. He started to become interested in fishes when he was a boy on his father's farm in the Middle West. He brought all sorts of wierd and slippery things back and put them in the watering trough or rain barrel or whatever it is they keep water in on farms. When little trout and such began filtering through the cistern, though, his father said he'd have to keep them somewhere else.

Mr. Orsinger became a fish scientist by a devious route. His first real venture was when he was still on that farm. He had been told that if he kept a horsehair in water for 60 days it would turn into a snake. With all the passion of a Louis Pasteur he watched the horsehair minutely throughout this period. Mr. Orsinger says horsehairs don't turn into snakes.

"That's just a myth they tell little boys," he said, sort of sadly, I thought.

• • • •

EVER since then, though, he has been watching fish eggs turn into fish. It was his hobby, when he worked as a heating engineer out in Chicago. He was, I gathered, a pretty successful engineer. At least, every now and then he would build himself a new house and almost the first thing he'd do would be to set up his aquarium. He often had this done before he got his heating plant in, which shows you just where his real interests lay.

Eventually he turned his avocation into his vocation and became associated with the Shedd aquarium in Chicago and some few years ago came to Washington. He has one of the world's most extensive libraries about fish. He doesn't know what his favorite fish is. He likes them all; but he is fondest of the fish which fight their way upstream. He goes fishing quite a bit, but mainly with a net and pulls out the mysteries of the stream, makes notes about them and puts his catch back. But he likes to eat fish. Had some for breakfast yesterday. Says that since he came here from the West there must be two more shore fishermen engaged all the time just catching fish for the Orsinger table.

He has one pet over there that isn't a fish. It's a frog. A jumping frog. It goes so fast, he says, that the average newspaper camera can't stop his action. Word got out about the frog not long ago and he is getting a number of challenges from various frog-jumping enthusiasts. He says if he gets enough entries he will stage a frog-jumping contest for some charity, perhaps out at the ball park. Mr. Orsinger says that if you don't know much about frogs you'll be surprised at the distance they can jump.

MR. ORSINGER says fish have lots of brains. As an example, he pointed out that if he had a long enough tank he could fill it with pilings here, stones there, and mud somewhere else, and if he put four varieties of fish all at once into the same water they would go right to their places. He has some trout over there that do tricks. They are trained, just like dogs, and jump through hoops. Perhaps he will have the hoop-jumping trout in action between March 8 and 15, when there will be a big exhibition of private aquaria over at Mr. Orsinger's place in the Commerce Department basement. Everybody's invited, and the place will be open until 9:30 at night. Come and bring your fish, he says.

Mr. Orsinger has a sense of humor. Once he was taking a shark from his tank when the nasty fellow turned and bit the hand that fed him. Took a real nasty nip out of Mr. Orsinger's finger. That had happened before. In fact it often happens. But a reporter happened to hear of it. He wrote an exciting piece about it. Next morning Mr. Orsinger's finger was all healed up, but he kept a white rag on it for ten days. Didn't want anyone to think that his reporter friend had exaggerated.

When I sought him out yesterday he was showing two school teachers and a group of kids around. But he didn't tell them that horsehairs make snakes. He proved long ago that that isn't so.

WPA Union Head Returned to Work

Miss Rosamond Richter, president of the WPA Union, who had been discharged twice from the WPA was reinstated yesterday by Aubrey Williams, assistant administrator.

Miss Richter was discharged December 5 in what the union charged was unfair discrimination.

Reinstated for the first time at the union's demand, she was transferred to a branch of the WPA about to be dissolved and in two weeks was out of work.

The union repeated its protest, and at a hearing yesterday convinced Williams that Miss Richter should be again reinstated.

"I am employing Miss Richter without prejudice," said the memo which Williams sent his assistant, Corrington Gill. He said that he would not allow any discrimination against the union in the WPA.

Fall Reported Better.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 27 (AP).—Hospital officials reported tonight that the condition of Albert B. Fall, Secretary of the Interior in the Harding Cabinet, is "definitely improved." Fall "seemed stronger today and was taking nourishment."

"There must be two stock markets," says Elmer Twitchell, "one known to the general public and the other operated in only by the financial page headline writers. Every day I pick up my paper and read the headline, 'Stocks Soar,' only to study the tables and find everything off about an eighth of a point. I've stood it for about a year now, but it is beginning to get exasperating. Where is the market the headlines tell about?"

Congress is going to examine Dr. Townsend. It is not a bad idea, but it might be a better one to have a doctor examine Congress.

Apropos of Mr. Mencken's recent assertion that "a Chinaman can beat Roosevelt" in November, Doris Kent wants to know if, in that case, the Capital will be known as Washieton.

This department notes with regret the decision to modernize the Murray Hill Hotel. We used to drop in at least once a year to see what an old-time hotel looked like. Its lobby was to us a thing of wonder. It had size. Not even Walter Johnson could throw a dollar across it. And to a dweller in the pint-size rooms of modern hotels the rooms at the Murray Hill were flabbergasting. It was a day's hike from a chair to a bed.

What Brook Was That Again?

'Tis now I roam fair Ridgefield's hills,
Far from the White Way's crowd;
'Tis now I miss you city folk
Who shrink from chill and cloud.
And while you moan your widening girth,
Afar from craig and nook,
I sally forth to skate upon—
Naromiyocknowausunkatankshunk brook.*

And though the snow is two feet deep,
And Darien's shores are drear;
With goodly chains I hie upstate
Beyond New Milford's cheer.
Of course I miss you summer folk,
And there's no time for book,
When I go forth to ice-fish in—
Naromiyocknowausunkatankshunk brook.

Oh, winter's grand up here in Conn.,
And life's one long hurrah!
This is the life that he-men crave,
Come up before the thaw.
Yours may be bridge or other game—
Perhaps some urban cook?
But give me snowshoes, give me skis and Naromiyocknowausunkatankshunk brook.

Hagood

Wednesday night in which Gen. Craig cited several instances of "lack of self-control, irresponsible and intemperate statements" in Hagood's Army record.

"I am unable to say whether Gen. Craig is being used to hide the mailed fist of terrorism," Metcalf said in a statement, "but I am informed by reliable sources that the matter was discussed in Cabinet meeting long before the order removing Hagood was issued.

"If this is a fact, it is apparent that the responsibility does not rest entirely with the War Department."

Metcalf on Wednesday introduced a resolution calling for investigation of the case with special reference to whether the officer's right of "free speech" had been abridged.

The resolution was referred to the Senate Military Affairs Committee and is to be taken up at its meeting today.

In a two-hour conference with Secretary Dern and Gen. Craig, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina; Chairman McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the House Military Affairs Committee, and Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, a frequent critic of the War Department, made an effort to have Hagood's "punishment" mitigated.

Action Held "Too Severe."

While the congressional delegation declined any statement after the War Department conference, it was reported that they argued the removal order was too severe and urged that it be rescinded or that he be transferred to some other post.

Inventory Approved On Mrs. Ickes' Estate

Chicago, Feb. 27 (AP).—An inventory of the estimated $500,000 estate of Mrs. Anna Wilmarth Ickes, late wife of Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, was approved today in probate court.

Mrs. Ickes' will left the bulk of her estate to her husband.

The inventory listed several pieces of real estate here and 59 shares of stock variously described as "desperate," "doubtful," and "deemed good." Included among goods and chattels, kept in Washington and valued at $1,371.50, was a collection of 71 items of Indian jewelry.

Mrs. Ickes was killed in a motor accident near Velarde, N. Mex., August 31, 1935.

World Prayer Day Will Be Observed

Women of all the Protestant churches in Washington will meet at 11 a. m. today in National City Christian Church for meditation and prayer, in observance of the World Day of Prayer.

The speaker at the service today will be Dr. W. S. Abernethy, of Calvary Baptist Church, and Mrs. Benjamin W. Meeks, president of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches, the sponsoring organization, will preside. Hester Walker Beall Provenson will read and Helen Turley will direct the music, with Lyman McCrary at the organ.

The Washington committee is headed by Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh, as chairman, with Mrs. H. M.Kendrick, Mrs. W. R. Rhoades, Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, Mrs. A. A. Stockdale, Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, Mrs. F. E. Edgington, Mrs. H. C. Briscoe, Mrs. W. L. Darby and Mrs. J. Claude Keiper.

Africa in Photographs Lecture Topic Tonight

The photographic story of a country in Africa long forbidden to white people, exciting tribal dances and music, and strange bird life will be included in an illustrated lecture on African travels by Laura Boulton, explorer, before members of the National Geographic Society this evening at Constitution Hall.

Mrs. Boulton recorded on the spot the music of native orchestras and singers, and these records will accompany motion pictures of the native dances. She will exhibit pictures of the famous black herons, which wade into shallow water, spread their wings, and then quickly snatch up the fish which swim into the shadow formed by the wings.

JeffersonDavis' Kin Interrupts Patent Hearing

A squarely-built, short old lady, dressed in a slightly faded red silk dress, her hat set aggressively on the back of her head, kept pushing at the arm of Lamar Saxon, uniformed guard in the House Patents committeeroom.

He barred her from rushing to the long green-baize table, at which the committee members sat. Before it stood Gene Buck, lean, gray-haired president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Producers, answering questions.

Her voice grew louder and louder. Her hat slipped back from her head, and her graying blonde hair straggled around her face. Spectators began to turn in their seats to watch her.

Officer Saxon convinced her she should get a letter from a Congressman in order to gain entry and recognition. She charged off, and the hearing relaxed. Buck, leaning casually against the witness table, began again to defend the rights of song writers, which will be "murdered," he said, by the Duffy bill revision of the copyright act, now being studied by the committee.

Soon she was back. Officer Saxon sent her letter to Representative Sirovich, committee chairman, who frowned, fingered the pink carnation in his lapel, and murmured, "No."

They told her that she couldn't appear. She began to talk louder. The officer and Frank Gan, Capitol plainclothesman, seized her and swung her down the aisle and out the door, while the photographers scurried for bulbs and cameras.

The little lady in the red dress, it developed, was Miss Susan Lawrence Davis, 65, a descendant of Jefferson Davis, she claimed. Some 35 years ago she wrote a history of the Ku Klux Klan, and believes that Claude G. Bowers, author-statesman, who is now Ambassador to Spain, plagiarized her book for his volume entitled "The Tragic Era." She wants from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000 damages from the Government.

She also wants $50,000 from the District of Columbia for an alleged two days' incarceration in Gallinger Hospital "for observation." Representative Carmichael, of Alabama (she is from Athens, Ala., in his district), introduced the bill for her.

She was discharged, ruffled but adamant in her insistence on a hearing and strode off indignantly.

But the glamour was gone from the Patents Committee hearing. Reporters returned apathetically to listen to Buck, Nathan Burkan, ASCAP attorney, and Billy Hill, song writer, who composed "The Last Roundup," Wagon Wheels," "The Old Spinning Wheel" and other song hits, conclude their testimony before the aggressive and persistent questioning of the committee.

A verbal battle between Representative Deen (Democrat), of Georgia, and Buck, over every question raised by Deen, featured session. Deen brought up the matter of the resignation of Warner Brothers from the ASCAP. Warner Brothers, controlling six music publishing companies, in order to have easier access to the raw material necessary for musical movie productions, left ASCAP in December.

It was asserted they sought larger financial returns from broadcasting chains then using on the air, in programs and from records, some 65,000 songs owned by the company's music publishing houses. The company said the returns were too small, and went on strike against the broadcasting chains. Since that date, none of the tunes owned by them has been broadcast.

Ousted From Patent Hearing

Harris & Ewing.

A woman giving her name as Susan Lawrence Davis, 65, of Athens, Ala., was forcibly ejected yesterday from the House Patent Committee's hearing when she tried to testify about alleged copyright infringement on her book. She claimed to be a descendant of Jefferson Davis.

Public Guards Movie Morals, Bishop Asserts

Catholic Committee Holds Censorship Brings Danger of Bureaucracy.

Public opinion, rather than legislation, is the weapon to keep the movies wholesome, the Catholic bishops' committee on motion pictures declared yesterday.

In legislative measures the committee saw "a grave danger of political censorship" and stated: "The Legion of Decency regards public opinion as a much safer guide than would be any regulations made by political appointees in a Federal agency.

"Since there has been a marked improvement in the moral tone of pictures, effected through public opinion, it seems reasonable to let the good work go on," the statement said.

"The Legion of Decency will continue to be vigilant, and to urge that all groups maintain an active interest in the moral significance of motion pictures."

About the probable effect of legislative measures, the statement said: "One law may lead to another. The result, in all probability, would give us a bureaucracy or final court of morals for motion pictures."

Members of the bishops' committee on motion pictures are: The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati; the Most Rev. John F. Noll, Bishop of Fort Wayne; the Most Rev. John J. Cantwell, Bishop of Los Angeles and San Diego; the Most Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, Bishop of Pittsburgh, and the Most Rev. Stephen J. Donohue, Auxiliary Bishop of New York.

New Zeppelin Gets Test March 2, Eckner Says

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Feb 27 (AP).—Hugo Eckener announced today that the new Zeppelin, LZ-129, will take off March 2 nder his command for its first trial flight.

"The new ship," said Eckener, "is designed particularly for South American, not North Atlantic, service."

"It will, of course, make variuos demonstration and survey flights to North America—one of which is scheduled for May 6—but it will not be on a regular North America service."

In "Klondike Annie," Mae West Ventures into New and Daring Fields of Romance

Blonde Star Is Vastly Subdued As Missionary

Film One of Odd Contrasts; Flu Hits Noted Visitor; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Mae West is perhaps the most daring and least objectionable in the implications of her romanticisms, in "Klondike Annie" that she has been at any time since she crashed the films with George Raft in "Night After Night" and then went on to galvanize a susceptible public by the unbridled nature of her performance in "She Done Him Wrong," the first individual starring vehicle which she contrived for her own cinematic uses from her stage play of "Diamond Lil."

This may sound a little like a Grade A specimen of paradox, but with a bit of elucidation may clarify itself.

In "Klondike Annie," Miss West makes her first appearance in the guise of a petted white woman in the San Francisco Barbary Coast's honky-tonk establishment of one Chan Lo, an Oriental, who speaks in labored cadences and entertains a supreme jealousy of those who attempt to encroach upon what he is pleased to consider his private preserves.

This Chan Lo is by way of being a sort of connoisseur of one thing and another and visitors of high degree frequent his far-flung gambling establishment, where "The San Francisco Doll," a singer of torrid songs, is one of the major and most coveted attractions.

Does a Little Knifing.

But "The Doll" gets a trifle "fed up" with the constant surveillance to which she is subjected and decides to join the Alaska gold rush. It becomes necessary in the carrying out of this laudable ambition to stick a long and lethal knife in the Chan Lo back. "The Doll" performs this homicidal service to humanity practically without a qualm and boards Capt. Bull Brackett's tramp steamer for Nome.

On the trip north, another woman boards the boat at Vancouver—Sister Annie Alden, intent on saving the souls of the unregenerate in the Arctic country that has gone gold crazy and forgotten the finer impulses of valuable living.

Sister Annie dies on the way to the Klondike and "The Doll," with whom Capt. Brackett has become insanely infatuated, and upon whose identity the police have placed a pretty certain finger, assumes the place of the Mission House worker and proceeds to masquerade as one to whom religion is the alpha and omega of existence.

Miss West, barring the hip-swinging, slithering walk that she always employs as one of the symbols of her social stratum on the screen, has kept her script almost unbelievably subdued.

There are no episodes in the story during which Miss West, Victor McLaglen, Phillip Reed, her two leading men, or the audience ever seems on even the remote verge of bursting into flame. The whole business is extremely placid and almost prudishly proper.

On Dangerous Ground.

Where the daring comes in is in the fact that Miss West has had the temerity to transfer the interests of a gaudy creature of the demi-monde to the serious teaching of religion to the ribald and heterogeneous habitues of the Alaskan dance halls.

There is a quality of theatricalism here that many will resent. The preaching of the Gospel is subjected to a sort of subtle ridicule—or at least a thoroughly fantastic interpretation—that will cause many to cringe and precious few to stand up and cheer.

To be sure, there is a sort of manufactured motivation and justification for all this that evidently was intended by the author and star of her own story to placate the religiously inclined, but it is drawn a little to thin to be more than partially efficacious.

Offers Strange Anomalies.

This is a strange adventure for Miss West before the cameras. She has three songs to sing, which she executes in her accustomed manner of a thorough-going reprobate, and Gene Austen sings another one or two in a revival scene that takes on all of the usual characteristics of an orgy in a dance hall. Miss West's songs are "I'm an Occidental Woman," "Mr. Deep Blue Sea" and "Little Bar Butterfly"—bizarre topics for a revivalist!

This column would hesitate to cast even a suggestion of discouragement in the laps of the Mae West fans, but to these eyes and ears "Klondike Annie" seems the least explosive and the most utterly passive of any picture she ever has made.

Victor McLaglen, as Capt. Brackett, does not hit even one guy on the jaw during the entire course of the action.

I ask you, what kind of a McLaglen picture is that?

Another brief backstage call upon Evelyn Laye, star of "Sweet Aloes;" Rex Harrison, her leading man, and Lee Ephraim, the producer of the Jay Mallory play, at the National Theater Wednesday night, was productive of the distressing information that Frank Lawton, the gifted young English actor, who in private life is Miss Laye's husband, is confined to their apartment in the Hay-Adams House by an attack of the flu, or the grippe, or something equally unpleasant. Personally, I suspect a germy ruse to preclude that hurried trip back to Hollywood prior to the opening of "Sweet Aloes" in New York. But I wouldn't hint such a thing in public!

Mrs. Rex Harrison also has been troubled with a bit of the consequences of this contradictory weather we have been having, but on Wednesday night seemed wholly recovered and in the best of spirits. Charming people.

As for my own laryngitis, you will be glad to know that I cannot speak above a whisper, which is a great relief to all and sundry!

Daughter to View Father's Story.

Mrs. Albert Gardiner, of Charles County, Md., a daughter of Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd, whose persecution at the hands of the Federal Government forms the basis of the film play, "The Prisoner of Shark Island," will be present in Loew's Fox Theater tonight to view this Darryl Zanuck production, being shown for the first time in Washington as chief feature of the screen portion of the program arranged for the new week.

Mrs. Gardiner will have the satisfaction of viewing a screen play which makes a valiant and largely successful effort to remove the stigma from the name of the obscure country doctor who was accused of being a conspirator in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, because, without knowing whom he was serving, he set John Wilkes Booth's broken leg in the early morning following the tragedy in Ford's Theater in this city the night of April 14, 1865.

Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, who is leading a legislative fight to pay honor to the courage and sacrifice of Dr. Mudd, will be host to a notable Congressional group at the same performance.

Many Notable Guests.

In the Presidential box at Loew's Fox Theater tonight will be Representatives William T. Schulte, of Indiana; B. J. Driscoll, of Pennsylvania; William Berlin, of the same State; Kemp Keller, of Illinois; Thomas O'Malley, of Wisconsin; Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa; Hubert Utterback, also of Iowa; Charles I. Faddis, of Illinois, and Willis Robertson, of Virginia.

These members of the Congress will be accompanied by their wives and other members of their families.

Also attending the performance will be Frank Yates, assistant to the Comptroller General, and Mrs. Yates; Mrs. Ernest Randolph, mother of the West Virginia legislator; Frank Babb, vice president of the board of governors of West Virginia University, and Mrs. Babb; Representative and Mrs. Robert Secrest, of Ohio, and Mrs. John S. Ridgely. Mrs. Ridgely's father was a neighbor of Dr. Mudd's and was with him at the time of his death.

I can assure these distinguished guests of the theater that they will see a picture of extraordinary power that makes a valiant but belated attempt to rectify an error of judgment that inflicted a tremendous injustice upon a man who was innocent if the evidence of the film may be taken at face value.

The French film, "Camille," based on the Dumas drama, will be presented by the Foreign Cinema League in Pierce Hall on Saturday night of this week. Yvonne Printemps, one of the outstanding actresses of the French stage and screen, plays the leading role. The film is equipped with those admirable abominations, subtitles in English.

Gene Goes West.

When what used to be known as Crandall's Metropolitan Theater began its experimentation in the then devious practice of presenting stage acts—especially since the theater hasn't any stage, but merely what is technically known to the trade as an apron—among its first bookings were Waring's Pennsylvanians, Jack Smith, the "whispering baritone," and Gene Austin, tenor.

The Warings came back many times, Jack not quite so often and Gene, from time to time, up to two or three years ago when he made his last local appearance on the stage of the Earle Theater.

The point of all this is that Gene wrote the music and lyrics for the new Mae West film that opens on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater today. In a sequence or two, he sits at a little cabinet organ and grinds out tunes—which he also sings—that are about the last things you would expect to hear at a religious service.

"Time Marches On."

Gene has grown a little thick through the narrows, wears a trick hair cut and a pair of handle-bar mustachios, but the voice is still there and it is good to hear him sing again.

There was a time when his recorded numbers were the biggest sellers in the United States. Maybe they still are. I hope so, because Gene is a very elegant fellow.

Sometime I shall rewrite the story of the afternoon when I almost arranged for his $1,000 Chow dog, Ming, to eat the arm off of Len Hall, at that time drama editor of the Washington Daily News.

Ming only missed by an eyelash and Len and I both fainted on the curb.

More fun!

Speaking of the West picture, as we seem to have been too much today, another old-time favorite appears briefly during one of its early footages—Conway Tearle, former leading man with Norma Talmadge and other silent stars of the first flight, who has not been seen around so much for the past several years. Mr. Tearle has not changed a whit, except that he seems to have lost some of his emotional punch."

Joy Comes to Town.

From the fact that he was in the back of the house last night, and in view of certain rumors that have bruited about the better grapevine routes these past two or three days, one suspects that when "Sweet Aloes" opens in the Booth Theater in New York, the role of the elder Lord Farrington, now played by Charles Bryant, will be in the capable hands of Nicholas Joy.

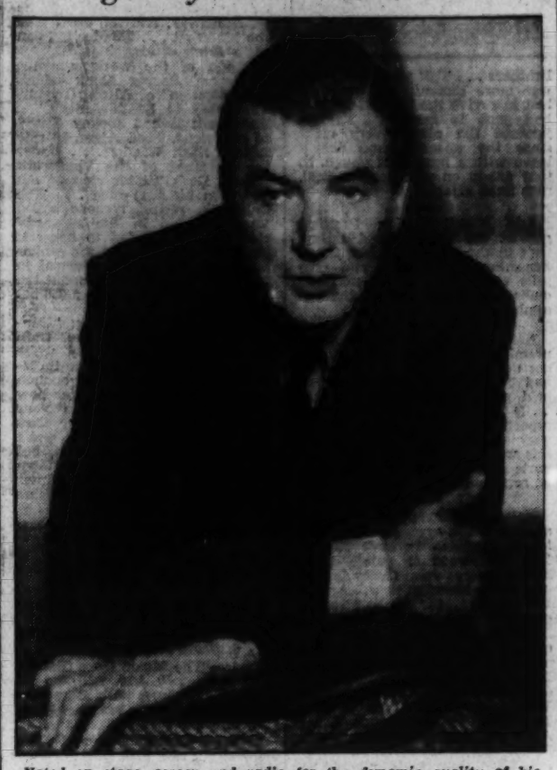
Mr. Joy, a large, handsome, gray-haired fellow, is an excellent actor who was last seen here in the ill-fated "Julie the Great," and before that with Ina Claire in "Ode to Liberty."

When Lee Ephraim decides to made the official announcement of the only substitution he contemplates in his present cast, to the best of my knowledge and belief, it might be well to check up against this comparatively wild guess—which may have some foundation in fact, at that.

What's-in-a-Name Note.

It is always well to bring Joy to a cast, when possible.

Sings Way to New Screen Fame



Noted on stage, screen and radio for the dynamic quality of his singing, as well as for an inborn sense of comic values, Harry Richman emerges as quite a fellow in "The Music Goes 'Round," opening on the screen at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater today. Riley and Farley, composers of the song—and may a kind Providence have mercy on their souls—will headline the stage portion of the bill. The above is a recent and excellent likeness of Mr. Richman, who is one of the head men in the song-singing industry.

7 Reach Safety After Ice Dangers

Crisfield, Md., Feb. 27.(AP).—Seven men reached Crisfield safely early today after having had to spend the night on a power boat wedged in the ice off the harbor here.

The boat, the Three Brothers, was returning from a trip to Tangier Island, Va., with six wholesale grocers, who had gone there for their weekly check of stores. The craft became lodged in the ice last night while entering the harbor.

There still are many floes in the harbor, but Tangier Sound itself is practically clear of ice.

The vessel was commanded by Capt. Ed Pruitt, of Tangier. Others aboard were Austin J. Loreman, C. C. Daugherty, Olin L. Daugherty, Rupert Catlin, T. Jefferson Webb and Fred Ward.

There is the scenario writer who says he'd leave Hollywood at the drop of an option.

When Bette Davis dines in the Green Room at Warner's her shrill laugh gains the attention of the tourists . . . It is nothing unusual for a columnist to play vaudeville or go on the radio and have actors and actresses as his guest stars . . . Therefore, to be different, I accepted Mary Pickford's invitation to broadcast with her last night . . . I believed it would be startling to have a columnist appear as a guest star for a change . . . Across the street from the Vendome there is a sign reading: "The Crossroads of the World" . . . Remember when the "crossroads" used to be Broadway.

• • • •

Edward Arnold's lawyer, filing the income tax report, asks Arnold if he didn't buy more clothes last year . . . "Didn't have to," answers Arnold, "I was always in a costume picture" . . . "Modern Times" and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" are playing in theaters along the same street . . . One flicker exploits the old style in pictures and the other exploits the latest technical improvements . . . The Fox-Twentieth Century studio had been flooded with the making of war pictures: "Shark Island," "A Message to Garcia" and "Zero Hour" . . . One afternoon, when none of these companies was working, Gene Fowler strolled by and declared: "What, no shooting, there must be an armistice."

• • • •

Hugh Herbert's ranch was called Rancho Herberto, but he pulled down the sign . . . Margie Lane is the cute singer at the Trocadero . . . Every night she performs before movie producers, but she can't get a chance in pictures, although she is under contract to Metro . . . Miss Lane is known as "the dubbing girl" . . . She sang for Eleanor Powell in "The Broadway Melody," for Joan Bennett in "Mississippi," for Wendy Barrie in "Millions in the Air," for Peggy Conklin in "Her Master's Voice," and for Anne Dvorak in "Thanks a Million" . . . But Margie Lane can't get the chance to sing for herself in a flicker.

• • • •

Often wondered why some of the movie actresses are seen with a different fellow practically every night . . . Decided to ask Betty Furness, who is about the "most romanced" young actress in Hollywood . . . Said Betty: "Not one of them is a real romance. I just go out with them for laughs. I like to laugh" . . . She explained why she goes with Cesar Romero: "He's a fine dancer. I go dancing with him—and he's nice company, and laughs . . . Al Scott. I met him in New York. We had dinner in Hamburger Mary's—in the kitchen. Scott is a nice fellow—and plenty of laughs . . . I used to see plenty of Cary Grant. We used to go to the Drive-in Theater or play backgammon. He's another person to have fun with . . . Austin Parker. I have dinner with him occasionally. He's got no polo tricks up his sleeve. I go with men who can make me laugh" . . . Okay, boys, buy yourselves a copy of Joe Miller's book and call on Betty Furness.

• • • •

Jack Holt, surprisingly, causes more "sighs" among the girls on the "San Francisco" set than Clark Gable does . . . A hit play which Broadway will see next season is "Night Must Fall," by Emlyn Williams, who plays the leading role in London, where it is a hit . . . Metro will co-produce the play on Broadway, for it will make a great picture for Robert Montgomery . . . Eddie Sutherland went to the station Sunday night to see his girl friend, Cleo Black, off for New York . . . He purchased the morning paper, just out, and gave it to Cleo . . . There on the front page was a photo of Eddie Sutherland and Loretta Young, and the story under it said that "Sutherland and Young are ready to elope to Yuma any minute."

• • • •

Belasco Has Another Satirical Hit in "Soak the Rich," by Hecht and MacArthur

Actor Connolly Is Amusing In New Comedy

"SOAK THE RICH." Paramount picture, produced, authored and directed by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur; featuring Walter Connolly, supported by John Howard, Mary Taylor, Alice Duer Miller, Lionel Stander, George Watts, Con MacSunday, Ilka Chase, Robert Wellsten, Francis Compton, Joseph Sweeney, Isabelle Foster, Percy Kilbride, Edwin Philips, John W. Call, Ed Garvey and Allan Ross MacDougall. Previewed February 11 by W. A. Whitaes.

To those who expect that a picture so threateningly titled as "Soak the Rich" deals with the doctrine of parting our wealthy few from a portion of their wherewithall, disappointment is surely to come; but to those who consider what might flow from the facile pens of Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, especially in the light of "The Scoundrel" and "Crime Without Passion," and are accordingly prepared for the unusual, this Paramount picture, somewhat hesitatingly brought in, will be one of those rare treats of the motion picture theater—a satirical comedy, with much more emphasis on the comedy than on the satire.

As one looks upon this work, there appears no element of present-day life that has been protected from the shafts of polite ridicule shot from the Hecht-MacArthur bow. No rancor, however, permeates the atmosphere, but rather good-natured lampooning of things as they are, without attempting to offering anything in the way of a substitute.

Indeed, the authors are not concerned with substitutes—they are just doing a bit of finger pointing, and laughing, and laughing, and laughing at what fools these mortals be.

Certainly there is a story. But even the gossamer fabric of narrative is even more ephemeral than usual and what is referred to as the skeleton is ghostly, to say the least.

Essentially, this is a narrative of a rich girl, with a very pompous father, and the poor college boy with ideas of political economy that are as nebulous in his own mind as they were supposed to be advanced. Girl meets boy. Girl is won over to the proletariat. She is kidnaped by a radical, and saved. Boy finally comes around, gets the girl and everything works out all right.

It is not the story, however, which is so convulsing—it is the trenchant, smart and brilliant lines of Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur as read by a superb cast which excellently fits action to the word. As the father, portly in physique and finances, is Walter Connolly, whose work needs no comment, since he is one of those actors who deliver a masterful job in any circumstance.

Two Newcomers.

John Howard is the young collegiate Communist, imbuing his fellow Leftists with that righteous fire which finds its expression in doing things "the Russian way" and protesting the dismissal of an economics professor who advocates soaking the rich. The girl in the case is Mary Taylor, a charming lass who makes an excellent complement for Mr. Howard's ideas.

Excellent as are these three in their parts, the one-man revolution, yclept Joe Muglia, stands out a tower of histrionic craftsmanship: the flawless artistry of Lionel Stander. As Muglia, who "could put Lenin in one pocket and Stalin in the other, and still have room for Karrrrl Marrrrx," Mr. Stander does a job which makes his Society for the Extermination of Monstrosities (Mr. Connolly is the first) a scintillating asset of major proportions.

In this picture the producers have not been interested in names, as is somewhat evident from the dramatis personae, but they have been in having the right one in the right part. So what the names may lack in familiarity, their owners more than compensate for in this series of delineations. Each member of the cast has his part, his lines of important dialogue, and everything is done with expert precision.

Direction Is "Tops."

In production, Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur have not done anything extraordinary, but in direction it is quite a different matter. So completely have the members of the cast become imbued with the spirit of this satirical comedy and its good-natured jabs at people and institutions that, under the directorial genius of these gentlemen, one can almost see the strings by which the animated marionettes are being manipulated.

Supplementing what to us is the season's most hilarious comedy are "Norwegian Sketches," a travelogue of the Norske country; "Some Wild Appetites," a study of feeding habits of various animals; a discourse upon skiing, with a Swiss background, and a release of the Pathe News.

In New Hecht-MacArthur Satire

Metropolitan

"THE PETRIFIED FOREST." Warner Brothers picturization of the stage play by Robert Emmett Sherwood, adapted to the screen by Charles Kenyon and Delmar Daves, co-starring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, with Genevieve Tobin, Dick Foran, Humphrey Bogart, Porter Hall, Charles Grapewin, Paul Harvey, Eddie Acuff and Joseph Sawyer. Directed by Archie Mayo.

Mr. Robert Emmett Sherwood has been on the screens a good deal of late, as witness "The Ghost Goes West" and this translation into terms of celluloid of his successful stage play of last season, and soon will be represented again in the local theater by "Idiot's Delight," the new play in which the Lunts soon are to be seen at the National.

That, however, may be deemed slightly aside from the point that in "The Petrified Forest," which revives its downtown popularity on the screen of the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater, beginning today, Mr. Sherwood penned a drama that combines with rare facility a philosophical view of life with a thoroughly entertaining quality of melodramatic romance.

Leslie Howard Stars.

A great deal of the success of the picture is due to the fact that Leslie Howard, who created the same role on the stage, still appears as the vagabond who feels that the generation of the Great War might better shuffle off this mortal coil and turn the conduct of the world over to the youngsters who have not become quite so satiated with the harrowing aspects of life as it has been lived these past two or three decades.

Supporting the star are Bette Davis and Humphrey Bogart in two of the most effective impersonations they ever have brought to the silver sheet. Bogart, as Duke Mantee, the bandit, turns in the greatest performance he has ever done for the cameras—grim, terrifying and authentic.

On the comedy side, little less can be said of the portrayal contributed to an impeccable ensemble by Charles Grapewin, that old vaudevillian who has become so fine a character actor, and Genevieve Tobin, a recent visitor to Washington, who makes a wealthy society woman one of the outstanding figures in a play that embodies many strange contrasts.

Short sound subjects and full 15-minute newsreel complete the bill.

RKO-Keith's

"THE GHOST GOES WEST." London Films picturization of a story adaptation by Robert E. Sherwood, starring Robert Donat, with Eugene Pallette, Jean Parker, Elsa Lanchester, Hay Petrie and Patricia Hilliard. Directed by Rene Clair.

Revealing many of those subtleties of humor and directorial touches that have caused him to be referred to—especially on this side—as the European Charlie Chaplin, Rene Clair, the great French director, demonstrates in the first production he ever has made in English that he is completely in command of the tools of his tricky trade.

With Robert Donat, star of the audible version of "The Count of Monte Cristo" and "The Thirty-Nine Steps," Eugene Pallette, one of the most reliable of the American cinema's more stolid comedians, and Jean Parker, most charing of the native ingenues, in the pivotal roles, it was hardly to be expected that "The Ghost Goes West" would not run at least two weeks at RKO-Keith's. It enters its second week today.

Sherwood Is an Adept.

No little of the whimsy of the fantastic story that is unfolded is due to the sagacious writing of that brilliant man of the theater—and in an earlier incarnation of a motion picture critic's desk—Robert Emmett Sherwood, who arranged the continuity of "The Ghost" for the cameras and microphones. He did a very skillful job of it.

Also seen in the picture, and on the American screen for the first time since "The Bride of Frankenstein," with Boris Karloff, is Elsa Lanchester, the distinguished wife of Charles Laughton, with whom she appeared as "The Flanders Mare" in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," the picture that really brought Laughton to eminence.

The supporting program also is being held over, including a new batch of Maj. Bowes' ubiquitous amateurs and the latest release of the Pathe News.

Help of Schools To Be Enlisted For Symphony

Plans to Raise $100,000 Discussed at Luncheon; Start March 5.

Another of a series of luncheons preparatory to the National Symphony Orchestra drive to raise $100,000 was held yesterday.

The campaign proper will begin March 5. Far flung organization work has been carried on in hopes of making possible continuance of the broad activities of the orchestra.

Luncheon participants included Dr. Hans Kindler, the conductor; Mrs. Tracy Dows, of the board of directors; Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, national committee chairman; Mrs. Emory Land, Navy committee chairman; Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Eugene Byrns, Mrs. William Whittington, Mrs. Milo Perkins, Mrs. G. R. Rowcliffe, Mrs. Mary Louise Johnson, Mrs. Charles Wilson, Mrs. Milton King, Mrs. Robert Lefevre, Mrs. Oliver Strunk, Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. George Garrett, Mrs. Miriam Hilton, Mrs. Royal T. McKenna and Miss Mary McQuade.

An important phase of the sustaining fund campaign will be a membership movement in Washington schools, public and private.

Local educational institutions have been particularly active in supporting the orchestra in the past. One of the reasons for their co-operation has been the numerous concerts given in the schools.

Mrs. Hilton, in charge of obtaining the aid of school children and teachers, and Dr. N. C. Barnes, music director in the public schools, praised the educational concerts.

"Why, more than 4,000 young people have attended the education concerts this year at Central, Eastern and Western High Schools.

"We hope the campaign will be so successful it ultimately will be possible to present educational concerts in every high school in town. High school auditoriums are large enough to accommodate high school students, grade students and parents."

Broadway

Heads North — By Ed Sullivan

Marching Through Georgia.

Aboard the Florida Special, Feb. 26.—Perhaps your correspondent got out of sun-kissed Florida just in time . . . The winter residents were getting jumpy and tossing punches as the train pulled out, and when the boys start heaving right hands, it is high time to evacuate . . . Fanciest fisticuffing of the season was turned in by big Jim Healy, trainer for Jock Whitney and Sammy Smith, who trains the nags that carry the blue and red silks of Pete Bostwick . . . These two have been nursing grudges for two years, dating back to the day at Saratoga when Trainer Healy thought Trainer Smith was eyeing his job . . . The grudge exploded at one of the night clubs here, and the resulting scrimmage was the gaudiest shindig served up in these parts since the big boom . . . They were separated before they tore down the portals of the establishment, but it is hoped that they will be rematched to a decision.

Another unusual development was the ousting of Earl Carroll from his local club . . . The last seen of Earl was a rear view of the producer racing hurriedly down one of the boulevards with a stranger in full pursuit . . . Either the stranger or Earl was letting out shrieks that filled the night with sound and echoed and re-echoed over the blue waters of Biscayne Bay . . . Another gentleman, tagged Schaefer, was hit violently and emphatically on the chin for throwing a glass at Cross and Dunn on the occasion of their debut . . . The glass had scarcely splintered on the parquet floor before the thrower was smacked . . . I'm in favor of that form of treatment for glass-heavers, for they are the most cowardly pests that embarrass night club performers.

You can trace this epidemic of slugging, I think, to the annoying weather that has harassed this community . . . The weather got the nerves of the visitors on edge and resulted in knuckle explosions . . . However, night club business in Miami has been terrific . . . Sensations of the winter season, for the second year in a row, have been the daffy Ritz Brothers . . . This year, their task was more difficult because they had to revive the Hangar after it had gone to seed . . . They've jammed the place every night since the opening, and they'll leave with a bundle of dough, as they are in on a percentage deal, plus fixed salary.

Harry Richman, after the world premiere of his flicker in Miami, got up on the floor of the Beach and Tenis Club and vowed that he'd never make another flicker . . . If the flicker is as bad as they report, that will be taken care of very easily . . . I'm amazed that this was a floperoo . . . Early reports from the Coast were that he screened well.

Notes: Kay Francis is sporting another black eye . . . Lady Ashley is supposed to have slipped into Hollywood to rejoin Doug Fairbanks . . . John Curry is several trains ahead of us . . . Arthur De Cordova, the Wall Streeter, gets to Miami this afternoon . . . Pancho's pretty frau, Mary Rosquellas, got there the day before we took off . . . Frank Parker and Dorothy Martin are holding hands on Miami Beach . . . Jockey Wayne Wright got $12,000 for piloting Top Row to victory at Santa Anita . . . The Jean Harlow-Bill Powell elopement is off, definitely . . . Lew Pollack is glaring at Abner Silver, claiming dirty work at the crossroads in Tin Pan Alley . . . The song in dispute is Silver's "Madonna Mia" . . . Pollack penned one long ago called "Angela Mia" . . . Dick Merrill leaves for New York this week, completely recovered . . . Lou Holtz, who took a bad beating from the ponies, ran $200 into $3,600 yesterday and got off the hook . . . Bright Haven, the best money horse at Miami, won a lot of the New Yorkers' carfare back to the big town, paying better than 4 to1.

It won't be long now before the snow-capped peaks of the big town loom into sight . . . The air has been getting chillier and chillier as the train pounds North . . . In a few hours now, we'll be on Broadway, and the devil take the hindmost . . . Wonder if I can get a drink of orange juice?

Laugh of the week was the California Racing Commission's "investigation" of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt at Santa Anita . . . Vanderbilt loaned Jockey Knapp to his friend, Fred Alger, to ride Alger's Dark Winter . . . Under the influence of the Vanderbilt jockey, Dark Winter stepped out and won his first race . . . The California racing tycoons called Vanderbilt up in the stewards' stand and demanded to know if he had made any sinister contribution to the horse's reversal in form . . . Maybe they thought the youthful millionaire won a $50 bet on the race.

The porter is calling "Manhattan Transfer" in the train corridors right now, and we're back home again after a three-weeker . . . That is long enough to stay away . . . No matter how pleasant, a place gets on your nerves if you stay longer than that . . . It was a swell trip, and I enjoyed every minute of it, but it's sweller to get back to town . . . Jeeves, dust off my winter muffler and get out the galoshes . . . Lulu's back in town.

Senator Thomas To Speak Tonight

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, and Dr. Ernest Minor Patterson, of Philadelphia, will discuss the economic aspects of neutrality and the new neutrality legislation before a meeting of the Academy of World Economics at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Senator Thomas is a member of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and formerly professor of political science at the University of Utah. Dr. Patterson is president of the American Academy of Political Science and professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania. The Academy of World Economics is affiliated with the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Acceptances for the meeting, as reported by Mr. Norman E. Townson, assistant treasurer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., who has been in charge of arangements, indicate a great interest among the members of the Diplomatic Corps resident in Washington and high Government officials, together with members of local learned societies.

J.W. Alexander, Wilson Cabinet Member, Dies

By the United Press.

Gallatin, Mo., Feb. 27.—Joshua W. Alexander, 84, war-time Secretary of Commerce in the Woodrow Wilson Cabinet, died tonight. He had been ill several weeks.

All but two of Judge Alexander's children were at his bedside. The two are Federal Judge George Alexander, of Juneau, Alaska, and Preston Alexander, of Washington, D. C.

The deceased and his wife celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary and her seventy-seventh birthday February 3, when he still was in good health. A fall shortly afterward sent him to bed and he never got up, although his injuries were not the cause of death.

Judge Alexander was perhaps best remembered in Washington for the furore he raised as a member of the House after the sinking of the Titanic in the Atlantic April 14, 1912, with a heavy loss of life.

Safety at Sea Efforts.

He championed a resolution, passed by Congress, which resulted in a call for an international conference to promote safety of life at sea. Great Britain and 13 other countries joined in the movement, and the conference was held in London.

Alexander, as chairman of the American commission, figured prominently in the parley. A convention was accepted by world powers and was credited with reducing the hazard of ocean voyages.

He was a member of Congress from 1907 until 1919, when he was appointed Secretary of Commerce by Woodrow Wilson.

As chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee he headed an investigating group which delved into an agreement between steamship lines to fix rates.

Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, January 22, 1852, he went to Gallatin, Mo., as a young man and studied law. He soon was elected to the Missouri Legislature and rose to be speaker of the House. After an interim as a circuit judge he was sent to Congress.

Glass Expresses Sorrow.

By the Associated Press.

A Wilson Cabinet colleague of Joshua W. Alexander expressed sorrow last night at the death in Gallatin, Mo., of the former Secretary of Commerce.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, Treasury Secretary during part of Alexander's term, described him as a "man of excellent character, a good force and a very useful public servant."

Senator Glass recalled that he also served for years in the House with Alexander.

Moe A. Baer Rites To Be Held Today

He was a Scottish Ritie Mason, a member of the George C. Whiting Lodge, F. A. A. M., and the Almas Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mina Baer, a son, Adolphe Baer, two brothers, Milton Baer and Dr. Bernard A. Baer, and two sisters, Mrs. Morris Wolf and Mrs. Ernest Maas, both of Tampa, Fla.

Funeral Today

PAUL A. PUTZKI, Washington artist, will be buried in Fort Lincoln Cemetery following funeral services at 2 p. m. today in the Hines funeral home at 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Putski died Tuesday night in Sibley Hospital. He lived at 5201 Fourteenth street northwest.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra plays third student concert in Central High School Thursday afternoon; Hans Kindler, conductor; Ann Sugar, piano soloist. Program: Lento and Allegro from Concerto Grosso No. 21 (Handel), first movement from pianoforte concerto in A minor (Grieg), third movement from Symphony No. 2 (Brahms), Chorale (Bach), Pizzacato Polka (Strauss), Norwegian Dance (Grieg), Russian Sailors' Dance (Gliere).

This was not Miss Ann Sugar's first appearance with the National Symphony Orchestra, but it is certain that her debut at a student concert four years ago must have been a mere fluttering of the wings compared to her poised flight yesterday afternoon. At 16, she is a most promising musician with an easy and fluent technique, and her reading of the first movement of the Grieg concerto disclosed her growing artistry in interpretation. Beneath her assured performance of the notes was an evident appreciation of their poesy.

For the most part a worker in miniature, Grieg created at least one masterpiece on the mural scale in his pianoforte concerto. It is instinct with the very pulse of the Norwegian people, as pure an expression of nationalism in music as has ever been written. Did one not know that Grieg's themes were his own, one would be ready to believe that they were borrowed from folk songs, so redolent are they of the northern forests above the fjords. They are themes that cling in the memory like the melodies of immemorial tradition.

Directing his informal remarks at the matter of color and form in music, Dr. Kindler was geniality itself in his simple explanation, which emphasized the importance of balance in the symmetry of structure, and the value of instrumental color in emotional and imaginative evocation. As usual, he had his auditors laughing while they learned.

Attendance maintained the standard set at the first concert, and represented as wide a territory; one group of 22 young people came all the way from Manassas. The program will be repeated this afternoon in Eastern High School, and on Monday afternoon in Western High School, where Miss Sugar will be greeted by her classmates.

Gen. J. C. Lynes, Noted Soldier, Educator, Dies

Confederate Leader, 91, Headed 3 Southern Institutions.

By the Associated Press.

Marietta, Ga., Feb. 27.—Gen. J. Colton Lynes, 91, distinguished military and educational leader in the South for many years, died at his home here tonight.

Gen. Lynes, who joined the Confederate Army when 16, fought in ten major battles.

Born in 1844, Gen. Lynes spent his life in the study of government, education and military tactics.

His own education was interrupted by the War Between the States and he nelisted at the age of 16 in the Confederate Army.

After the war he went to Europe, and took his doctor's degree at the University of Paris. He also studied in Berlin and Brussels.

Upon his return to this country he took up educational work. His first professorship was held at Carolina Military Institute. He later became president of Marietta Female College, the South Georgia Military and Agricultural College, and the Middle Georgia Military and Agricultural oCllege, in turn.

For several years he was assistant superintendant at King's Mountain Military Academy, Yorkville, S. C., and held professorships at the Citadel, Charleston, S. C., and at Shorter College, Rome, Ga.; he retired from the Citadel in 1906.

Gen. Lynes helped organize the United Confederate Veterans, and in later life served as inspector general.

During the Franco-Prussian war he served as assistant secretary of the American Legation in Paris.

Apart from his work as an educator, Gen. Lynes was a poet and composer. He was also editor of the Ex-Confederate for several years.

France to Ask League To Drop Italian Oil Ban

Paris, Feb. 27 (AP).—Informed persons said tonight France would move for abandonment of the plan of oil sanctions against Italy when the League of Nations' committee of 18 meets at Geneva next week.

The French, it was reported, will endeavor to switch the attention of leading powers to the danger of rehabilitation of the Rhineland. France's stand, reported to have been formulated by the cabinet today, was said to be that the position of the United States as an oil-exporting nation, would make oil sanctions inadequate, and therefore the whole subject might well be dropped.

Spain Orders Closing Of Fascist Quarters

Madrid, Feb. 27 (AP).—The director general of public safety tonight ordered the closing of all Fascist headquarters throughout Spain.

Spanish Fascists, who number about 80,000, have clashed many times with Socialists since the general elections of March 16, in which Leftists were victorious.

Eight persons were wounded in a clash tonight between civil guards and Leftist demonstrators at the town of Albaladejo in the Province of Ciudad Real.

Clyde Short Dies.

Concordia, Kans., Feb. 27 (AP).—Clyde Short, 53, chairman of the Kansas Democratic State Central Committee, died at his home here today of pneumonia. Short, a prominent attorney, was born in Rochester, Ind.

Rites Tomorrow For Charles Burton

Funeral services for Charles Granville Burton, 66, well-known florist, who died Wednesday in Garfield Hospital, will be held tomorrow from his residence, in Cottage City, Md., with the Rev. Lawton Reily, rector of Pinckney Memorial Church, officiating. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Born in Louisville, Ky., Burton came to Washington at the age of 12. He was the founder and head of Charles G. Burton & Co., florists, and had been in the nursery business for 18 years.

Burton was president of the Exchange Bank of Prince Georges County at the time of his death. He was also a member of the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce, the Men's Club of the Pinckney Memorial Episcopal Church, Hyattsville; Mount Hermon Lodge of Masons, Hyattsville; Ada Chapter, O. E. S., Mount Rainier; the Washington Board of Trade, the Florists Club of Washington and the Florists Telegraph Delivery Association.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nellie Burton, and four sons, John H., Charles G., jr., William G., and Robert E. Burton, and a daughter, Esther V. Burton.

Creek Yields Body Of Slain Girl, 16

Pittsburgh, Feb. 27 (AP).—Rushing waters of a tiny stream today uncovered the nude body of 16-year-old Elizabeth Louden, partially hidden in silt. Detective Frank Ritz said the girl had been assaulted and beaten to death.

Dr. J. W. Means, of the coroner's office, declared she had been cut upon the head and throat with a sharp weapon—possibly a miner's pick—and had received five skull fractures.

The attractive girl—a high school student who worked as a domestic to help pay for her education—had been missing six weeks. Police held one man for questioning. They said he might be the "tall, dark man" friends of Elizabeth said had followed her from the home of Robert Allot, at Rennerdale, where she was employed.

Daughter of Doherty To Wed Dane, Is Report

Managua, Nicaragua, Feb. 27 (AP). A reliable authority said tonight Miss Helen Lee Doherty, daughter of Henry L. Doherty, utilities magnate of New York and Miami, and Theodore William Wessel, of Danish nationality, would be married here tomorrow evening.

It was said they would be married at the mansion of President Juan B. Sacasa and would go by plane to Cristobal, Canal Zone, Saturday morning.

Peruvian Leader Dies.

Lima, Peru, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Dr. Cesar Elguera, 62, at one time Peru's minister of foreign affairs, former Ambassador to Chile and holder of other important government posts, died today. He had been in retirement at the seaside resort of La Punta.

Minott Porter Funeral Rites Set for Today

Patent Office Examiner Will Be Buried at Rock Creek.

Funeral services for Minott E. Porter, 66, principal examiner at the Patent Office, who died Wednesday, will be held this morning at 10:30 from his residence, 1428 Madison street. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Born in Media County, Ohio, Porter received a bachelor of science degree from the University of Michigan in 1893, and later received his C. E. degree there.

In 1894 he came to this city and was a computer in the hydrographic office of the Navy Department until 1897. He then held a similar post in the Naval Observatory until 1901.

In the latter year he entered the Patent Office as fourth assistant examiner.

Receiving a master's degree of patent law from George Washington in 1906, he became a member of the bar of both the District Supreme Court and the District Court of Appeals.

He was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Alva M. Porter; a son, Clarence H. Porter, of Boston, and a sister, Miss Pearl Porter, of Cleveland.

Rites at St. Alban's For Harry W. Burr

Funeral services for Harry W. Burr, 56, automobile man, who died Wednesday, will be held today at 3 p. m. from St. Alban's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery. Burr died unexpectedly while fox hunting with his brother, Albert DeVere Burr, at Charlotte Hall, Md. His home was at 1709 Euclid street.

A native of Washington, he entered the automobile business more than a quarter of a century ago and for many years was a dealer. Since 1929 he had been in the same business with another firm.

Fond of the outdoors, he was a hunting dog fancier and breeder. He was a member of the Washington and Columbia Country Clubs.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Elizabeth and Mary Burr, two other brothers, Francis Ward Burr, Baltimore, and William Norvell Burr, Washington, and a sister, Miss Mary Burr, Washington.

Culbertson on Bridge

A great many players have a lamentable habit of relaxing when defending against a part-score contract. Granting that a game or rubber is not involved, it still is extremely shortsighted to permit the fulfillment of a contract that may give the opponents a decided advantage on the next hand. Some of the greatest tragedies at the bridge table result from desperate efforts to "boost" a team that has a part-score on which to lean. It seems a somewhat safer philosophy to try to defeat the previous part-score contract and start the next hand "at scratch."

In today's hand the defenders were faced with nothing more terrifying than a two club contract on a love score. Nevertheless, they remained alert and not only gained 90 points but kept "below the line" clear.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 heart	Pass
1 spade	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
2 clubs [final bid]

North opened the ace of diamonds and South signaled with the nine. Two more diamond tricks were cashed and South then led a small heart. Dummy's queen won. Two rounds of trumps, the king and queen winning, were followed by a low spade to the jack. North hopped up with the king and returned a trump. Dummy's jack won and the jack of spades was played. South won the ace and made the killing lead of the thirteenth diamond. Declarer was helpless. It made no difference whether he trumped in his own hand or in dummy. Actually he trumped, but North discarded his spade and had a trump left to kill West's high spade lead, insuring that dummy's fourth heart must be lost to South's ten. Had declarer discarded a spade, North would have let go a heart, preventing dummy from cashing the ace and king and West from ruffing the last trick with the ace of clubs.

It must be admitted that the declarer carefully set the stage for his own defeat by drawing two rounds of trumps, but the defenders nevertheless deserved praise for grasping their opportunity.

Capital Lenten Parties Make for Gay Season

Ambassador of Italy, Signor Rosso, Host Monday at Dinner; Troyanovskys Entertain Tonight; Saitos Receive Today; Other Events Numerous.

By Francesca McKenney.

Although Lent is on us and members of Capital society had expected to spend six weeks of comparative quiet, they are now finding it will be very gay, for each mail brings several invitations for teas and dinners, and on many evenings there are two and three dinners for which invitations have been issued. The majority of the parties will be informal with the exception of those given by members of the Diplomatic Corps, which always have an air of formality.

Among those who will entertain at dinner during Lent is the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, who has issued invitations for dinner on Monday evening in the embassy. The Ambassador always entertains at charming parties in the beautiful embassy on Sixteenth street, and at his dinners he has a delightful way of bringing older members of official and resident society together with the younger members.

The Ambassador was the guest of honor last evening at the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Graver Mather, at the Sulgrave Club. The club was attractively decorated with Italian colors and the table had a centerpiece of early spring flowers.

Stones Present.

Among the guests, who numbered 32, were the Associate Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, the Counselor of the Italian Embassy and Marchioness Rossi-Longhi, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Strauss, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Princess Boncompagni, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Charles Henry Butler and Dr. and Mrs. Frank Jewett Mather, jr., of Princeton, N. J.

During the dinner the Ambassador presented to Mr. Mather the order of an Officer of the Crown of Italy, which was conferred on him last evening by the Italian government in recognition of his researches in the Italian archives concerning Italian art, and as a cofounder with Mrs. Mather of the Italian Light House in Rome for the prevention of blindness and justice for the blind. Mrs. Mather, the former Winifred Holt, was decorated in 1920 as a founder of the Italian Light House.

The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky will entertain at dinner this evening in the embassy and on Thursday, March 12, they will be the guests in whose honor Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom will entertain at dinner at their home on Columbia road.

Saito's to Receive.

This afternoon the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito will entertain at a reception, for which cards have been issued, in the beautifully appointed Embassy on Massachusetts avenue. The Ambassador and Mme. Saito have issued invitations for a dinner on Thursday evening, March 12, in the Embassy.

The Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun have issued invitations for a dinner on Wednesday, March 18, in the Embassy on Sheridan Circle.

Last evening the Ambassador of Belgium and Countess van der Starten-Ponthoz and the Minister of The Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With were the ranking guests at the dinner given by the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, which was followed by a short recital by Mr. Maas, Belgian pianist, who is spending several days in Washington. Additional guests were invited for the musicale.

The Ambassador of China, Mr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, will entertain at dinner in the Embassy tomorrow evening. Mme. Sze, who is spending some time in her home in China, is expected to return to Washington during the early spring.

De Pastorizas at Home.

The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza were at home yesterday afternoon in the Legation in celebration of their Independence Day and last evening they entertained at dinner in the Legation.

The retiring Charge d'Affaires of Sweden and Baroness Beck-Friis, who will leave Washington next week for China, where the former will assume his new duties as Charge d'Affaires in Shanghai, were the guests in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey entertained at dinner last evening. Baron and Baroness Beck-Friis will be the guests in whose honor the retiring Counselor of the Swiss Legation, Mr. Louis H. Micheli, will entertain at a farewell luncheon today.

Many parties are being given in honor of Baron and Baroness Beck-Friis and also for Mr. Micheli, who will leave Washington about the fifteenth of March for Rome, Italy, where he will assume his new duties as Counselor of the Swiss Legation.

The Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Boncesco entertained at dinner last evening, when their guests included the Secretary of the Yougoslavian Legation and Mme. Perazic, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Murray and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Healy.

To Visit Mexico.

Mme. Boncesco will leave Washington next week for a trip to Mexico. En route to Mexico, Mme Boncesco will stop in New Orleans, La., where she will visit a week. On her arrival in Mexico she will be the guest of the Counselor of Rumania Legation and Mme. Florescu.

M. and Mme. Florescu left Washintgon last December after spending several years in Washington, where the former was Counselor of Legation. The Rumanian Legation in Mexico City is a newly created post which was only established a few months ago by Mr. M. D. Draghicesco, who was a visitor in the Capital in December, when he was on his way to Mexico.

Others who are entertaining are Mrs. George T. Marye, who will entertain at luncheon today in her apartment on Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Emerson Howe has issued invitations for a reception on Sunday afternoon in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue, and Mrs. Thad Brown will entertain at luncheon today.

Mrs. Charles M. Lea entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in honor of her guests, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Newton, and again at dinner last evening in their honor. Mr. Newton gave a lecture yesterday at the Sulgrave Club on "The Joys of a Book Collector."

Magna Charta Dames Officer Will Visit Here

Mrs. Julian Ortiz, Wilmington Matron, Will Be Guest of Mrs. Clopton.

Mrs. Julian Ortiz, whose home, Valmy, is one of the loveliest estates around Wilmington, Del., will arrive at the Shoreham this weekend with her daughter, Mrs. Forrester H. Scott, to visit Mrs. Hoggatt Clopton and her daughter, Mrs. Eloise Clopton Webb.

Mrs. Ortiz is an officer of the National Society, Magna Charta Dames, which will meet at luncheon at the Shoreham on Tuesday, and she and Mrs. Scott will attend with Mrs. Clopton and Mrs. Webb.

The Magna Charta Dames were organized in Washington in 1909 and are a social order composed of women who are lineal descendants of the barons of England to whom King John of England delivered the Magna Charta at Runnemede Field on the Thames in 1215.

The luncheon Tuesday will be the second time the national group has met in Washington since its organization. Mrs. David Dixon Porter, wife of Brig. Gen. Porter, a regent of the organization, will entertain at tea for members of the society Monday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. George Harrison Houston, president.

Harrison Potter Concert Artist

Pianist on Candlelight Program at Phillips Gallery Monday.

The artist at the candlelight concert at the Phillips Memorial Gallery Monday will be Mr. Harrison Potter, pianist, who will come from New York to play the Cesar Franck Quintet as assisting artist with the Pro-Musica Quartet of the Washington Chamber Music Society.

Mr. Potter is a student of Philipp in Paris and has appeared as soloist with many symphony orchestras in this country. He played in recital in Washington once before, three years ago.

These intimate concerts are sponsored by a distinguished group of Washingtonians and also by Dr. Nicolai Sokolov, former director of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra.

The hour of the next concert has been changed from 5 o'clock to 5:30 as the members of the quartet are also members of the National Symphony Orchestra, which holds its children's concert that same afternoon. The complete program which will be offered includes the Haydn Quartet in D and the Cesar Franck Quintet in F. The artists in the Pro-Musical Quartet are Mr. Robbins, Mr. Essers, Mr. Sevely and Mr. Hamer.

Entertainment Held For Poetry Circle

Dr. Vaughan, Sister Receive; Guests Read Poems.

Dr. George Tully Vaughan and his sister, Mrs. J. E. Hoffman, entertained members of the Poetry Circle Wednesday evening at their home on I street. They were assisted in receiving by the president of the Washington branch, Mrs. Gardner Phillip Orme.

The guests of honor, who read original poems, were Mrs. Nannette Kent, Miss Gertrude Newlin, Mrs. J. E. Hoffman and Mr. Frank Johnson. Mrs. Leacy Naylor Green-Leach, editor of the Circle Magazine, presented Mrs. Orme with a copy of an anthology which she compiled. There followed readings by members—Miss Anne DeLacy, Miss Isabelle McCoy Erwin, Mrs. Orme, Miss Diana Powell. Miss Maud Judith Scruggs played an original composition, "Mareese," an Indian love song. Dr. Vaughan closed the program by reading a poem by Dr. L. L. Williams, "The Lament of a Vertebra."

Miss Beulah Hess Wed To Mr. Erle Silverman

The marriage of Miss Beulah Hess, the daughter of Mr. Nisan Hess, to Mr. Erle Silverman, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Silverman, took place at 11 a. m. at the home of Dr. Abram Simon, who performed the ceremony.

Mr. Silverman and his bride left on a motor trip to Florida. When they return, on March 7, they will be at home at 1500 Monroe street.

First Lady Leaves To Inaugurate New Radio Development

Mrs. Roosevelt left Washington yesterday morning for New York, where she will spend several days, returning to the Capital the early part of the week.

The First Lady went to New York to inaugurate a new development in the use of radio in education by which seniors in the city's high schools will be required to listen to a discussion program and then participate in similar meetings in the schools. The program will be called "America's Town Meetings," and will come from Town Hall.

Texas Club to Hold Dance Tomorrow Night

The Texas Club of Washington will hold a leap year dance tomorrow evening at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. Karl Crowley, the president, and Mr. Ernest H. Donohoo, the secretary, and the program committee are making arrangements for an entertainment on "Texan Independence Day."

Derns Entertain At Dinner for 18 In Their Home

Senator and Mrs. McNary Are Hosts to 36 at Sulgrave Club.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern entertained at dinner last evening in their home, Highwood, in Stephenson place. The guests numbered 18.

Mrs. Ralph Church, wife of Representative Church, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. J. Donald Halstead entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Washington Club.

Major and Mrs. Richard D. LaGarde will be "at home" informally on Sunday from 4 until 6 o'clock. Their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ben LaGarde, will receive with them.

Miss Cecilia Plowden Talbott will entertain at luncheon at the Shoreham tomorrow in honor of her sister, Mrs. John Hagerty, of Boston, Mass., who is visiting at the home of their parents, Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin E. Talbott.

THERMO-ROLLER

featured in Vogue and Harper's Bazaar

Harper's Bazaar says "Thermo-Roller was first perfected by a Swiss doctor and sold all over Europe. It was recently brought to America and is now sold all over here. It is a scientific object, scientifically named. It is 'Thermo' because it is heated electrically (reacts to both AC and DC). It is 'Roller' because it looks like a (hard) rubber rolling-pin and rolls the fat away. This is how: the heat breaks down fat tissues, the rolling then dissipates them into thin air—and a thin you: a firm, vigorous Venus. You use Thermo-Roller yourself when and where you will: on the hump at the back of your neck, on your thighs, your hips, your diaphragm. Safety note: a platinum pointed thermostat automatically turns off the heat when it reaches maximum." Vogue also praises the Thermo-Roller. Let us show you what it will do for your figure.

F STREET AT SEVENTH NATIONAL 5100

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer, accepts a commission to find the young Hon. Laurence Morland, who has disappeared in Africa. Aboard ship, he meets Josephine Cascoden, enigmatic young Englishwoman, who calmly announces she is going with him. He says she is not, but she climbs into his special car at Johannesburg.

CHAPTER IX.

Clashing Wills.

HE entered and sat down facing her, his back to the engine. "Do you mind if we have a little talk?" he asked.

"No," she answered, without turning her head from looking out upon the empty landscape, dotted only here and there with a lost Dutch farmhouse.

He studied her face in profile and abruptly it took on a meaning never before discerned. It had the look of one who has said a last good-by to friend, but not to foe—a look of abject loneliness.

"What's the matter, Jo?" he asked as soon as he was sure of his voice.

"Nothing," she answered in a flat tone. "Nothing matters."

"You won the first turn," he said encouragingly.

"I'll win them all," she answered.

"You can't," he told her, "not without my help." She lifted one shoulder and let it fall, dismissing his assertion. "Are you still determined to follow me?" he asked weakly.

"Then why——" he began, and broke off to change the tenor of his question. "But you do admit your wanting to go along has nothing to do with me—how I look, the way I've treated you, what I am?"

"Yes," she said after a moment's thought; "I can admit that."

His brows tightened into a knot of concentration; then, abruptly, he gave up the puzzle. "Ever since you hurled the thunderbolt of your insane intention I've been forced to think of you as mad. Perhaps there may be some other explanation—there must be—but that's neither here or there at the moment. What I'm interested in now is whether you're trying to drive me crazy, too."

She turned and looked at him as if he were something far away, only dimly discerned. "No. What happens to you can't make any difference to me. I'm not trying to do anything to you."

"Whether you're trying or not, you're doing it!" he declared. "Why don't you come straight out—tell me what's back of all this?"

"I can't."

"You think I wouldn't understand?"

"No—not that. I think it might be the only way of beating myself, or stopping me from doing what I want to do."

She had the rapt look of the fanatic, of one who would burn at the stake rather than fail. While he still stared her head fell forward and she buried her face in her hands.

"Crying?" he asked.

Instantly her head went up and she raised dry eyes to his. "No. I don't remember ever having cried in my life."

"I'm ready to make a bargain with you," he said.

"What bargain?"

"I'll take you along," resumed Ballard, "make things easy for you, in exchange for a price."

A telltale glint in the darkness betrayed the swerving of her eyes to his face. "What price?"

"It's so small it sounds absurd. Only that you'll tell me why you shrank the way you did the first time I touched you."

"When must I tell you? Whenever I like?"

"Why, yes," he answered in a dull tone.

"Then I accept," she said promptly. "I promise I'll tell you the day I get where I want to go."

He had been trapped; he knew it and did not mind. He rose, snapped on the lights for her and, without looking back, returned to his own compartment.

Awakens In Veldt.

Early next afternoon Josephine awoke from a nap to a sense of stifling, as if a blanket of gauze had been drawn across her face. She raised the blind and looked out upon a macabre scene—half desolation of the desert, half weird forms of cacti and flat-topped thorn trees. The low veldt had fallen suddenly upon her and its indolent air quickened the pace of her lungs while it slowed the beat of her heart, producing for a time a mild sense of oppression.

She had slept fairly well during the night and all morning had been expecting rather than waiting for Mallory's appearance. She washed her face and was just tidying herself before the small mirror when he knocked.

She slid back the door. "Come in."

"I came to tell you," he said, "we'll arrive in about half an hour."

He took the same seat he had occupied on the previous evening. "Sleep well?" he asked.

"Splendidly. And you?"

"Rotten. But what else could I expect?"

"Why?"

"You; yet the fact that you were here, across a thin partition, hadn't anything to do with it. My promise was what kept me awake."

"Perhaps you want to take it back," she said with apparent indifference.

"No; I'm not that kind. Part of the time I've been thinking of ways and means, and as for the rest, I've been going through readjustment—schooling myself for the strange role I've got to play."

"Aren't you making trouble for yourself? Why should it be so strange? All you have to do is to tend to your business and trust me to tend to mine."

He smiled faintly without looking at her. "Nothing is as simple as that—not even in Africa! Has it ever entered your head you're an extremely attractive young girl?"

"I'm not quite a ninny," she answered frankly. "I know my arms and legs are all right and that people can't seem to help looking at my face when I'm in action—riding to hounds or playing games. But the way a person looks isn't what makes him attractive."

"What does?" he asked curiously.

Mallory's Strange Dress.

"I know, but I can't put it very plainly. It's something like closing a switch. If you turn on the power, you're attractive; if you don't you're not. You just stand there without being anything in particular."

He laughed shortly.

She expected him to go on, but he did not. With his head half turned he sat staring out blankly at the whirling landscape. It was her turn to study him, unrestrained—all the more unrestrained because she was scarcely conscious of what she was doing. Yet she knew well enough what had attracted her attention. It was the way he was dressed, in a style she had never before seen. Her eyes traveled from his feet upward. He wore pipe-clayed shoes, white socks and white linen trousers, but it was his jacket of the same material that aroused her curiosity.

Its semi-military cut fitted his square shoulders and torso so exactly as to give his body a strange allure and she felt a twinge of envy for the freedom it must feel within so light a covering. Her eyes, dazzled by the freshness of the linen, rose to his face. Seen in profile, and brightly illumined by the glare from outside, it struck a new note, seemed strangely undiscovered. It was clean-shaven, deeply tanned, distinguished by a firm chin and a firmer nose. The triangle of the gray eye beneath the penthouse of a black eyebrow and the dark hair, close-cropped and crisp, gave point and form to a well-shaped head. That head now turned on her with a suddenness so startling it drove the breath back down her throat.

"What the devil do you think you're doing?"

"Nothing," she gasped.

"I've been watching you in the window-pane. Well—what about it?"

"What about what?"

"Me—my eye, ear, nose, my hair and the rest of me. Is there anything wrong? Anything you want changed?"

At the direct attack her eyes locked with his, her blood flowed back to normal and in a moment composure had replaced all her distress.

"Nothing," she said with the impact of a bullet.

Body Sachet Is New Note In Toiletries

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A NEW NOTE was sounded in the toiletries mart with the advent of what is known as "body sachet." It's really a dried and powdery perfume. Or better yet, it's a bath powder in sachet form made of some exciting scent.

And is it fun to use? After a good warm bath you step out on your bath mat and sprinkle yourself with this misty powder. The aura of fragrance around you makes you feel like you were enveloped in a cloud of perfume.

Lots of dusting powders are sweet scented, too, but the scent isn't lasting. With the body sachet it is. That's why this is such a nice thing to use in the evenings to give a lasting fragrance to your arms and back. Here's the last word in luxury that comes to you for a very modest sum.

Dinner-time Chimes.

Easy to Clean Gloves.

BOONS to busy women are the easy-to-clean gloves made of a chemically treated suede that's virtually impregnable to dirt. If you haven't tried a pair, you've missed something.

Admittedly, they cost a wee bit more than ordinary gloves. But think of the money you save on cleaners' bills! And think of the many, many moons they'll last. And the time they save. And their neat appearance.

When they begin to grow slightly soiled, you simply rub them together and, presto, the dirt disappears. Or, if, due to some drastic treatment the smudge is more than a slight affair, you just take a rubber sponge and whisk the spot away in the twinkling of an eye.

Orange Blossom Bouquets.

TIED with a dainty, glistening silver ribbon are the orange blossom bouquets presented to you free of charge with the purchase of a small bottle of orange blossom perfume.

It's such a light, lovely fragrance, and lasting, too, made by one of the oldest perfume concerns in the country.

Linen Collars, Lace.

NECKWEAR with that lingerie touch which Paris favors for spring may be found in a gala display in a certain F street store. Here are beautiful starched linen collars, trimmed with real point Venise lace. Most of these have cuffs to match.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Is Mother's First Duty to Her Child or to Herself, Asks Woman Who Wonders if She Should Resign Job and Devote Herself to Full-Time Care of Baby.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your clearheadedness is the true reason for my writing to you. Can you think out my problem for me?

It has become a great issue between my husband and myself, and I think it is time for a disinterested person to step in.

• • • •

I am 32 years old, have been married ten years and have an adorable baby 11 months old. The question is: Shall I leave this baby in a stranger's hands, paying her $40 a month, when I am capable of earning only $125 a month? I worked for four years before the baby came. One question always in my mind is: "Suppose something should happen to the baby in my absence?" Another is: "If I give up my job and stay home, what will I do when the baby doesn't need me any more. Will I be sorry I didn't continue working and save money?" These unanswered questions constantly running through my mind are wrecking me physically and ruining the years of my life which should be happiest.

• • • •

My husband's only answer is: "You know what you're doing." But the truth is I don't, and I'm positively frantic. Is my first duty to my son? I love him so and want to be with him, yet is it more commonsensical to think of myself? The latter is something I have never done, as I took care of my invalid mother for eight years before she died, years during which most girls are having a glorious time. My husband's salary is sufficient to support us nicely, although we are buying a home and no luxuries are allowed. Help me soon, won't you? I do need your advice. Sincerely, WORRIED.

Mother Has Spiritual Functions to Perform.

DEAR WORRIED: During the first three to six years of a child's life I should say a mother's first duty is to her child. These are the most impressionable, the most formative years of a child's life, and where it is at all possible I believe a mother should subordinate all other demands upon her attention to her child's subconscious needs. She should keep in sufficiently close and continuous contact with her child to be able to maintain an intelligent, alert yet unobtrusive watchfulness over all forces which conspire to shape his social environment as well as his reaction to that environment.

• • • •

Hear what one of our leading psychologists has to say on this subject: "The chief burden of the child's early initiation into the charmed circle of human society usually falls on his mother. A mother's first duty to her child is to vouchsafe to the child the fundamental human experience of one entirely trustworthy human being. Without this experience the child remains forever a stranger in an enemy country. The child need not experience this bond with an entirely trustworthy fellow being with his blood mother—any human being can play this role, but in the great majority of cases it devolves upon his own blood mother.

• • • •

"When the mother has accomplished her first spiritual function, the initiation of the child into the fellowship of human beings, her second function begins. A mother's second function consists in training the child to develop his own powers independently, that he may transfer the human bond to other members of society—his father, his brothers and sisters, nurses, servants, relatives, playmates and teachers. She must make him independent and courageous."

• • • •

The question for you to decide is this: Who is the better qualified to give your son his first fundamental experience of knowing one entirely trustworthy human being—you or a $40-a-month hireling? If you are not qualified by temperament, education and emotional balance to do this job, you may as well turn it over to a hireling, the best you can find for the money you can spend, and continue in the business world making your $125 a month.

Attend to Each Task in Its Own Right Season.

OVERWEENING MOTHER LOVE is likely to be as bad for a child as indifference and neglect. For, says the same psychologist quoted above, "The pampered and spoiled child who has experienced too much mother love, who has learned to make the social bridge only to his mother and found complete emotional satisfaction in her, feels no urge to extend the circle of his social interests and remains attached to his mother in a parasitic relationship . . . A great many of the college suicides are found among dependent, spoiled children who declare their mental bankruptcy by giving up the struggle for life."

• • • •

If you are better qualified than another to guide your son's development, and if your husband is able and willing to support his family on his earnings, my advice to you is this: By all means resign your job and devote the next few years to doing a fine job of child-rearing. Once a child enters school he no longer belongs to his parents. He has become a member of society. If you fail to become acquainted with your child in spirit now and during the next few years you will have missed the very essence of motherhood. And you do not sound to me like a woman who can afford lightly to risk this loss.

• • • •

As to what you will find to do when your baby doesn't need you any more, the appropriate answer to that seems to be contained in an old Irish saying: "It's time enough to bid the devil good morning when you meet him." In attending to each task of life in its own good season, we find ourselves, as a rule, the more richly qualified for the next which comes to hand. When you have honorably discharged the responsibility of motherhood, you will probably be equipped to step into a bigger and better job than the one you hold today. M. H.

Women Invade Sports World With Knitting

Needles Turning Out Bags, Skirts, Hats and Even Bathing Suits.

THE AMERICAN WOMAN enters the sports world armed with a pair of knitting needles. And with these needles she is turning out suits, skirts, sweaters, gloves, hats, bags, and bathing suits which are appropriate for the rough and ready wear of the out-of-doors.

Take for instance the twin sweater set shown in the accompanying picture. It's ideal for the golf course, and simply grand for a walking costume. It's smart, it's comfortable, it's practical, and becoming. It's suited to balmy spring weather. The yarn, called "Nubby Knit" is a combination of combed cotton twisted with rayon. When summer comes and the two sweaters together are slightly "over snug" for the weather, then it's the little slip-on under sweater that's a blessing ten times over, and a perfect mate for crepe, linen, and pongee skirts.

The simplicity of this twin sweater set speaks eloquently of most knit styles. Half their charm lies in their distinguished plainness. It is this quality, too, that makes most knit things so excellent for sports wear.

As popular as these sweaters are the three-piece suits consisting of skirt, sweater and jacket. On breezy days the three together make a delightful outfit. With the advance of the season, however, we find more and more women garbed in the skirt and slip-on sweater out for their stroll in the park, or following the little white pellet over the links. During the last year the one-piece dress and jacket costume has come into its share of popularity for out-of-doors occasions.

Since so many women have started "knitting their own" for sports wear, the tight, dowdy, ruffly, fluffy things that sometimes appeared have, for the most part, done an excellent vanishing act.

Buttons of Varied Materials Shown

Paris (U.P.).—The most amusing component of feminine apparel today is to be found in buttons. They come in every shape and size and in every known material. There are real sea shells to button on dark crepe dresses, and there are mother-of-pearl stars, half moons and crescents. Other dresses fasten with old coins in gold, silver and copper, while elk horns in ivory and coral make unique buttons, as do different varieties of fruits and berries. Schiaparelli shows swirls of twisted cord which has been varnished and colored to match or contrast with the dress. Equally smart are her buttons in black patent leather which are shaped like acorns.

'Failure Is Impossible,' Theme of Brande Book

"Wake Up and Live" Volume Stirs One to Progress; More Planning and Less Talking Advised for Women With Jobs.

By Laura Vitray.

THERE ARE personalities on which we look back as if we had had contact with warm sunshine which served to open up the little hard buds of possibility in our minds.

Eight years ago this spring I was dashing along Fifth avenue, New York, with a manuscript of a short story in one hand and a wedding invitation in the other. The wedding was at noon, and I saw by a street clock I had just time to make it to the Little Church Around the Corner if I did not care to be late. But there was the manuscript, which I had foolishly brought along with the idea of submitting it to a magazine. It would be unseemly to appear among the wedding guests with the bulky envelope.

LAURA VITRAY.

In my dilemma I stopped short on the sidewalk and glanced all around. And there, neatly riveted onto the stone wall of an imposing portal, was a small brass sign, "The Bookman."

I laughed aloud, for the Bookman at the moment seemed something far beyond my most ambitious dreams.

"Nevertheless, I can 'file' my story there for a day," I chuckled. "When I get it back with a rejection slip I'll take it out again, and in the meantime I shall be rid of it."

So I hurried to The Bookman's offices on the second floor and flung my unwanted child at the switchboard operator. Without allowing her a chance to say there was no use leaving it, I hopped into the elevator again and was off, full of glee.

That, curiously, was not the end of my adventure. My little story did not come bouncing back to me, but two days later I did receive a letter from one Dorothea Brande, managing editor of The Bookman, asking me to call. And out of that visit grew an association which meant much, very much, to my development.

If I were asked to describe Dorothea Brande I should simply say that she was radiant. Failure could not flourish close to her. To know her was to live more.

Yet it is always a safe guess in regard to such a personality, that it has come to grips with the Lemon Failure at some time, and thoroughly vanquished him. Perhaps the struggle has been as long and as determined a one as the outcome was unequivocal.

It was not surprising to me the other day to pick up a small volume, just published, by Dorothea Brande entitled "Wake Up and Live!" containing the rules for the self-training of athletes who wish to give Old Man Failure a knockout blow.

Bid to Adventure.

Perhaps if I had not remembered the author as I did I should never have troubled reading it. Commercial pep talks affect me furiously. But then I was fairly certain Mrs. Brande had something better than that to offer.

The book is an invitation to an adventure. "An adventure?" you say. "There is so little of that element left in life! Everything is so terribly drab and dull! Unless, of course, one has plenty of money to go adventuring. And even if one has, it is fairly difficult to get a thrill out of this humdrum world."

But there is where you are wrong, and Dorothea Brande will prove it. Thrills are not to be fished for in the drab and dusty outer world, but in the deep pools of the inner self. The fat and juicy trout which inhabit those still waters are only to be hooked with the bait of self-mastery, on a rod manipulated with a firm, unwavering hand. First you will bring in little prizes, afterward bigger and bigger. But the whole going, from the beginning, is bound to be fun. Your life will feed upon the nourishment of these conquests, instead of wasting away to death-in-life.

Forgetting Failures.

"Act as if failure were impossible," is the first rule of the game, for Dorothea Brande. She explains very simply how one may quickly get oneself into this happy frame of mind, by setting the eyes of the mind firmly on the future, and leaving the dead past, at every point, to bury its dead. Even the successes of the past are not things to be dwelt upon. When an incident is over it is over. Go on from there.

The real problem is to beat off the lethargy which at every point attaches itself like a ball and chain to the runner's foot. That lethargy is failure, and it is death. To defeat it, Mrs. Brande offers 12 suggestions for unusual action, which, if you follow them regularly, will bring you back to life from your present condition of human automaton.

Here are samples:

Spend one hour a day without speaking, except in answer to questions. Think one hour a day upon one subject exclusively. Plan to live two hours a day according to a rigid time schedule. Set yourself 12 different instructions on paper, shuffle them and follow the one you drew.

Helped to Action.

These and the rest of the 12 are merely setting-up exercises. They are meant to help us to stop thinking about doing things and to do them.

Yesterday, after reading my former adviser's book I put it immediately into application. Something I had meant to get started on for months,—no, for years—I did get started on, in such a way that I cannot easily turn back. The translation of an old daydream into a living reality has had me chuckling with the deep sense of adventure ever since.

It is so much more fun to live than to die; to struggle than to lie down in failure's bed. Today there came to my mind the axiom of another inspiring woman I once knew: "Give to others what you want for yourself."

I never understood that, I resented it. But today the explanation of its true meaning came to my mind. Not to give up the things to which you aspire, but in gaining them to carry others along with you. Of such stuff is the success of a Dorothea Brande. In running she calls to those behind her joyfully: "Come on, it is easy to take the leaps! Wake up and live!"

Ethiopian Wives Enjoy Beatings

Ethiopian wives enjoy being beaten by their husbands, according to a correspondent of Nana, who recently made a study of Abyssinian domesticity.

The Ethiopian women expressed surprise that American women were never beaten by their husbands.

"If my husband didn't beat me at least once a week I'd know there was another woman in his life and I would break a cooking pot over his woolen head," said one woman. "If my husband didn't beat me, every other woman in the block would laugh at me."

Tetanus Peril Now Reduced By Antitoxin

Once a Hazard of Every Accident, Lockjaw Can Be Conquered.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

LITTLE more than a generation ago accidents were all too often followed by lockjaw. There was then no known method by which the disease could be prevented. A cut finger contaminated with dirt, a wound from a splinter of wood or a nail—all were likely to terminate in this much dreaded infection.

Today—thanks to the development of an antitoxin that can be used to prevent the disease—tetanus, as it is called—can be conquered. The infection yields readily if the antitoxin is given before symptoms develop—before the poison produced by the bacilli has attacked the nerves.

The period which elapses between the accident and the onset of symptoms varies from 1 to 20 days, the average being about 10. The patient complains of chilliness and general malaise. Shortly thereafter he notices a slight stiffness in the neck and then tightness of the jaw which makes chewing and swallowing difficult.

Gradually the symptoms become more pronounced and the muscles of the back become involved. Convulsions—due to the toxin—may be so severe that the body is arched and breathing is interfered with. The muscles of the lower jaw are often contracted so that it is impossible to open the mouth, hence the name lockjaw. Agonizing pain usually accompanies the spasms. The outlook is favorable if the disease continues over ten days.

The introduction of antitoxin has materially decreased the fatalities, although in 1930 there were nearly 1,300 deaths in the United States from this infection. We cannot hope to destroy all the tetanus bacilli in the world, but we can stop its ravages in the human family. With proper attention to wounds (thorough cleaning) and the prompt use of antitoxin not a single case would develop.

House Group Favors Local Magistrates

Sub-committee to Report Favorably to Full Judiciary Body.

Opposition of Wheatley Ignored; Prettyman Argues for Bill.

The District Commissioners' bill to set up magistrate courts in Washington as a means of relieving congestion in Police and Traffic courts will be reported favorably to the House District Committee by the judiciary sub-committee next week, Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, said yesterday after a public hearing.

The sub-committee reached its decision despite the opposition of H. Winship Wheatley, former president of the District Bar Association, who appeared in behalf of a special committee on court procedure named some time ago by the Commissioners.

Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, the author of the measure, was its only champion, but he challenged critics to offer some better plan of expediting minor criminal cases.

Provides Four Courts.

The bill provides for the establishment of four magistrate courts in police precinct stations in as many sections of the city. The magistrates would be paid $1,000 a year and probably would be taken from the ranks of retired Army officers and business men.

Wheatley's main objections were: The $1,000 salary is inadequate to attract capable men for the posts.

The requirement that a defendant post $10 collateral in appealing to Police Court from a magistrate's verdict is "a vicious principle," he said, and "would constitute the selling of justice."

Night Court Revival.

Wheatley suggested that the night traffic court, still authorized by law, be resumed if additional facilities are needed to relieve congestion in Police Court. Congress should be asked to appropriate the funds, he said.

Recalling that the justive of peace system was at one time in operation in the District, he said:

"Don't undertake to go back to lay administratioin of justice. It will result in chaos."

Chairman Palminsano said he would oppose the appointment of retired Army officers or business men and young law school graduates for the magistrate jobs. He added that the magistrates should be men of experience in dealing with "the laboring class."

Julian Richards, representing the District Bar Association, asked Prettyman various questions on the bill but expressed no opinion on it.

Gambling Suspect Placed Under Bond

Dan A. Calacicco, 48, of 510 Irving street northwest, arrested by the vice squad and charged with setting up a gaming table, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, yesterday.

He was placed under $1,500 bond for his appearance at a hearing set for March 10.

Lieut. George Little of the vice squad said Calacicco is one of three men wanted by police in connection with the raiding of a gambling establishment at 709 G street northwest, last Monday, in which 39 persons were arrested. Thirty-six were later released.

Three men held after the raid, another picked up on a warrant Wednesday and Calacicco will all be ordered to the hearing.

Electrical Meeting.

The annual meeting of employes of the National Electrical Supply Co. will be held this evening at 7:45 in the auditoruim of the Potomac Electric Power Co. E. C. Graham, president of the supply firm, will speak.

You Can't Arrest Me!

Capt. William S. Orthman, Head of Capitol Police, Finds Members of Congress 'Pretty Good' Despite Privileges; Force Handicapped.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Members of Congress—in spite of special privileges and constitutional immunities—are "pretty good" when it comes to law observance on Capitol Hill, according to Capt. William S. Orthman, commanding the Capitol Police Force.

With heated debate over recent stories in The Washington Post still ringing from the chambers of both House and Senate, Capt. Orthman rose yesterday in defense of Congressional automobile drivers.

As he spoke, however, a number of cars—all bearing "Congressional" tags—were noted in defiant violations of local parking regulations. It was infractions of this type—apparent abuse of "rights" and "privileges"—that Senator Borah, Republican Presidential candidate, condemned in a recent speech on the Senate floor.

But, said Capt. Orthman, law-breaking lawmakers on Capitol Hill are always ready to co-operate.

"I find that the distribution of 'courtesy cards'—and sometimes personal warnings to these members bring results," added the captain.

Force of Young Men.

This statement recalled a recent assertion by Representative Marion A. Zioncheck (Democrat), Washington:

"My car is parked between 'no parking' signs and there is a certain red light on the Capitol Grounds I always drive through because it is useless," said the Washington Representative.

The entire burden of Capitol Hill law enforcement falls on youthful members of the Capitol Police Force. The majority of them are college students and young men who have come to Washington to be "in the center of things."

With a few exceptions, their appointments to the police force are made from Congressional "patronage" lists. In the minds of House and Senate members, they are "constituents."

Their duty is to enforce laws and regulations governing the Capitol Grounds. Important among these are traffic safety rules.

One policeman admitted it was "a hard job" to be fair and impartial when "you have to watch your step all the time." It means enforcing the law with one eye on certain "privileges," "Congressional immunities" and "patronage rolls," he added.

Capt. Orthman, a former Chicago detective and traffic expert, said his force includes 135 men. Of these, 61, working eight-hour shifts, are assigned to traffic and law enforcement on the Capitol Grounds.

Capitol Police Handicapped.

It was estimated that 1,500 persons connected with Congress—Senators, Representatives, secretaries, etc.—drive automobiles. Capt. Orthman said that 10,000 cars a day pass through the Capitol Grounds.

But all that members of the Capitol Police Force can do—as far as "Congressional" cars are concerned—is to pass out "courtesy cards" warning of an infraction, it was pointed out.

But during a recent "first night" at a downtown theater, at least three 'Congressional" tag holders were observed in flagrant parking violations.

Traffic was heavy, yet from all indications these tag holders decided to abuse their "privileges" rather than obey the law.

Again, as one member of Congress has already said, they appeared to feel that:

Resolution Asks Full Publicity For All D. C. Traffic Violations

A resolution urging "full publicity in all traffic cases and their dispostions" was submitted yesterday at a meeting of the Washington Board of Trade traffic committee.

Introduced by Dr. D. Franklin Hilton, the resolution provided that the Police Department make public a copy of all records covering traffic notices, summonses, arrests, warrants, etc., including court dispositions.

The name of Senator Davis was mentioned during debate on the resolution.

"If Senator Davis is interested, do you want that noted in the record?" Dr. Hilton was asked.

"That's what the resolution intended to cover," he replied.

The notation, "Senator Davis interested," appeared recently in a Police Court case involving two youthful false fire-alarm ringers The youths were placed on probation by Judge Isaac R. Hitt.

Meanwhile, ten additional names were added to the growing list of permit suspensions for first-offense speed violations. Suspensions ordered yesterday were:

Russell D. Cody, 3614 Connecticut avenue northwest, 40 miles, 30 days; Milton Conn, 5620 Colorado avenue northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; Irenus M. Gunter, 6612 Seventh street northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; Talmadge Friday, 936 E street southwest, 40 miles, 30 days; Stanley Hardin, 6636 Georgia avenue northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; Ralph M. Hardy, 2129 Northampton street northwest, 36 miles, 15 days; Robert E. Henault, 325 L street northeast, 38 miles, 15 days; Curtis L. Hillyer, 2151 California street northwest, 40 miles, 30 days; George E. Irwin, 304 Taylor street northwest, 44 miles, 30 days; Elmer Johnson, 715 Gresham place northwest, 38 miles, 15 days.

2 Night Schools To Close; Low Funds Blamed

1,000 Students to Be Transferred; 30-40 Teachers to Be Dismissed.

Limited funds will force the closing of Central and Hine Night Schools, and the consolidation of their courses with Roosevelt and McKinley Schools, it was learned yesterday.

Central Night School will be closed first, but probably not until April, Edward J. Lockwood, director of night schools, revealed yesterday. Abbott Vocational and Webster Americanization Schools will continue to operate on full schedule.

The consolidation, which will involve the dismissal of from 30 to 40 teachers and the transfer of about 1,000 students, will be similar to consolidations in previous years.

With a limited budget, Lockwood explained, the night school schedule is arranged to operate at capacity during the fall months, when registration is at the peak, and is then narrowed as attendance drops off.

The peak registration this year was 9,000 students, during November. Present attendance, Lockwood estimated, is down to 5,000, with a further drop expected with the spring weather.

Building Program Approved.

The five-year-school-building program to care for the existing excess of high-school students and the estimated increase in enrollment during the period as outlined recently by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, received unanimous approval of the finance committee of the Board of Education yesterday.

The report, the ninth in a series prepared by Dr. Ballou on the building program, will be presented to the full board at next Wednesday's meeting.

Dr. Ballou estimates that the total number of high-school children for which additional accommodations will have to be provided by 1942 was 3,490 white and 2,010 colored.

To meet this need he recommended completion of a six-room addition to Woodrow Wilson High School, seven additional rooms at Roosevelt High School, construction of a new school at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest, remodeling the Eastern High School gymnasium into 13 classrooms, completion of the high school under construction at Anacostia and erection of a smaller high school in the same area, and purchase of ground for a new high school in the vicinity of Taft Junior High.

For colored schools, Ballou suggested that all ninth-year pupils at Dunbar, Cardozo and Armstrong High schools be transferred to junior highs; that a high school be erected on Benning road northwest and that ground be purchased for playground purposes near the Cardozo School.

Overpass on K Street Indorsed by Civic Unit

Plans for an overpass on K street to relieve congestion on M street were indorsed last night by the Rock Creek Civic Association at a meeting held at Ebenezer Church Hall. A plan for use of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal bed for relief of congestion was also approved.

Officers elected included Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, president; Mrs. Beta Butler, vice president; Mrs. Eleanor Hicks, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edith Foster, recording secretary; Dr. Joseph M. Dodson, financial secretary; the Rev. G. E. Curry, chaplain; Richard W. Carter, whip.

Tennessee Day Sunday.

Tennessee day will be observed Sunday at 9:30 a. m. by Vaughn Men's Bible Class in Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest. Lynn C. Drake will speak.

Anti-Sedition Bill Backers Plan Battle

Radicalism to Be Topic On 2 Fronts as Sisson Hearings Resume.

McCormack to Defend Disaffection Measures; Scored by Maverick.

The drive for the passage of the military disaffection bills, recently repudiated by Secretary of War Dern and Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland, one of the original authors of the bills, will be resumed next week, when Representative John W. McCormack, co-author, takes the floor in their defense.

With hearings on the Sisson bill to repeal the anti-red rider that forbids the mention of communism in local schools, scheduled to be resumed Monday, a struggle between liberal and anti-red Congressmen on two fronts was forecast next week.

To the long list of indorsements of the Sisson bill was added yesterday that of Mgr. John A. Ryan, professor of moral theology at Catholic University and director of the National Catholic Welfare Council.

Although Mgr. Ryan will not testify at the hearing, as he will be out of the city, he plans to write Representative Fred J. Sisson a letter today outlining his stand. Last night Dr. Ryan summarized his views on the rider by describing it as "silly and ridiculous and hardly a compliment to intelligent people."

To Press Fight.

McCormack's decision to press the fight for passage of the anti-sedition bills, despite administration opposition, was revealed last night when Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, bitter opponent of the proposed legislation, assailed the Massachusetts Congressman for "going in for red-baiting when there's so much real work to be done."

Maverick revealed that McCormack telephoned him late yesterday to say that he was going to speak on the disaffection bills next week. Later McCormack verified this, explaining that his speech was to be an answer "to the misinformation about the bills that has been circulated from so many sources."

"A great many people think these bills are aimed at pacifists, and at the infringement of other civil rights," McCormack said. "They aren't. The bills are directed solely against the Communists, and I'm going to make this clear in my speech next week."

In his blast against "McCormack's tooting the horn of the red bogeyman," Maverick pleaded for Democrats to "drop this red-baiting and get down to the real issues facing the country."

Freedom of Speech.

"No Republicans are taking an active part in attempting to destroy civil liberties," Maverick pointed out. "The Democrats themselves are attempting to force through the bills denying freedom of speech. This is a minority of Democrats, but nevertheless Democrats. For them to do this is not only undemocratic, but destructive of the party, and the utterest nonsense.

"It looks to me as if Congress as a whole had decided not to do anything to meet the economic issues, and will therefore spend the rest of the session making speeches against each other, and denouncing the "red menace." The Republicans will have good ammunition with which to denounce us Democrats by showing it is really we who are attempting to violate the Constitution, even though the Administration and the Army oppose such legislation.

"Mr. McCormack is a fine and able gentleman. He is on the Ways and Means Committee, which is supposed to find ways and means to balance the budget, and to write tax laws beneficial to the Nation. Being an able gentleman, and an authority on taxation, he can do a real service by devoting his time to that subject.

"The public is getting bored with all these "red-hunts." I am sure that they would much rather listen to speeches on unemployment in Massachusetts, on social security and old-age pensions, and they might even be interested in the Constitution. I would be glad to assist Mr. McCormack in gathering material for speeches on any of these subjects.

"When we go on red-hunts we are evading the issues and real problems confronting the Nation."

Maverick also revealed that he had received a letter from Dr. Robert Montgomery, head of the economics department of the University of Texas, now on leave of absence, scoring the anti-red rider and urging its repeal.

Resolutions endorsing the Sisson bill were made public yesterday by the Washington Newspaper Guild, representing more than 300 local newspaper men, and the Parent-Teacher Association of the Macfarland Junior High School.

Veteran Bone Chipper Retires From Museum

JOHN M. BARRETT.

John M. Barrett Leaves 'Prehistoric Age' Behind to 'Enjoy the Living Present;' Served Institution for 46 Years.

Tomorrow will mark the end of the "prehistoric age" for 70-year-old John M. Barrett, of 1014 Independence avenue southwest.

It is not that Barrett has fallen behind the times, but that tomorrow he retires after 46 years of service in the National Museum, from his post of junior scientific aid in the prehistoric vertebrate division.

Ever since 1918 Barrett has been working with the bones of prehistoric animals—dinosaurs, reptiles, Weird taurtle-shaped creatures, horses and whales of extinct species. These bones, dug up by scientific expeditions are sent into the museum, still embedded in the rock formations of the centuries. Barrett's job consisted of chipping the rock from the bones and then assisting in mounting them among the gleaming, fascinating specimens on exhibit in the museum's halls.

"I've been chipping rocks from bones until my hair has grown white," Barrett remarked lightly yesterday. "I thought I had better quit before I chipped my own bones by mistake."

As a youth of 24, Barrett started with the museum, then housed in the old, red-brick Smithsonian Institution, as a laborer. He worked up to assistant engineer in charge of the boiler room, chief clerk in the document division and finally, in 1918, into the vertebrate division.

Barrett's first "bone-chipping" job was on a prehistoric reptile discovered in a Midwest quarry. His toughest job was to clear all the foreign rock matter from the bones of the 70-foot dinosaur now in the main hall—an eight-year task.

Mounting the bones after they have been extricated from the mass of rock in which they are found requires patience and skill. A metal framework has to be fashioned to serve as a support for the skeleton. What makes this task so difficult is that the framework has to be twisted and bent to fit the curves and joints of the bones.

But Barrett's "prehistoric" days are gone forever. On retiring he plans to live on a farm that he bought several years ago in Westmoreland County, Va. There he expects to "take it easy" for the rest of his nonprehistoric days.

"I've had my fill of bones," he said, chipping away at the rock-covered whale skull on which he was working. "I'm not even going to have a dog on my place for fear he may scratch up some."

Holdup Victims Identify Man Held by Police

3 Others Sought in Series of Minor Taxicab Robberies.

Five victims of recent minor holdups last night identified a prisoner in a police line-up as the man who robbed them. The loot included several taxicabs and less than $100 in cash.

No charges were placed against the prisoner pending further investigation. He was held in the First Precinct Station.

Police meanwhile, sought three accomplices.

Three of the robberies occurred Wednesday night.

David Pirie, 223 Fourteenth street northwest, was hailed at Ninth and E streets and ordered to drive to the Mall. The leader pressed a gun behind the driver's neck and said, "Shove over your dough." He handed over $6 and was ordered out of the cab while the bandits drove away. The automobile was located at Third and C streets northwest.

An hour later the group hailed William J. Gilman, 1426 Columbia road northwest, at Ninth and I streets northwest. Using the same methods they robbed him of his cab and $4.

The third victim, William L. Hughes, 1214 D street northeast, picked the bandits up at Twenty-first and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The crippled gunman forced him to stop and took $4 and the cab, after Hughes had been forced into the street.

Terrelle B. Crum Named To Phi Beta Kappa Unit

Students elected to Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity yesterday at Brown University included Terrelle B. Crum, son of Mrs. Edith B. Crum, 712 Taylor street northwest. He was one of 26 seniors honored. Crum attended Antioch College until he transferred to Brown.

The fraternity also admitted Charles Evans Hughes, 3d, of Riverdale, N. Y., grandson of Chief Justice Hughes.

D. C. Racing Opposed.

Resolution opposing the legalization of horse racing in the District and favoring the licensing of claw machines and other amusement devices were adopted recently by the First Ward Citizens Association.

Zoning Law Consent Plan Is Attacked

Abuse of Privilege Given Adjacent Property Owners Cited.

Elimination of provisions of the zoning law permitting certain uses of property on consent of owners of 75 per cent of property within 200 feet was indicated at the conclusion of a public hearing held yesterday by the District Zoning Commission.

The hearing was called to consider a seven-page amendment to regulations, proposed by the zoning commission, to end all consent provisions, under which there has grown up a widespread "racket" according to zoning officials.

Operators, for example, select a certain piece of property zoned first commercial as a good location for a gasoline station. Such stations are not permitted in first commercial except with the written consent of the owners of 75 per cent of the property within 200 feet. Having bought consents from those owners least affected by the proposed change, the operators then seek a buyer for the gasoline station site, despite the futile protests of owners of properties immediately adjacent to the station site, whose property would suffer greatest damage.

A gasoline company recently sought to establish a gasoline station at Twentieth and New York avenue northwest. Owners of a large and controlling adjacent property demanded $10,000 for giving their consent. Since the commission initiated the move to eliminate all consent provisions, the price has dropped to $3,000. There now are 700 gasoline stations licensed in the District.

Two Weeks for Briefs.

Decision of the commission will not be made for at least two weeks Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, announced at conclusion of the hearings. Citizens associations, business organizations and others interested were given two weeks within which to file briefs or written statements supplementing their oral testimony.

W. C. Magathan, of the Takoma Citizens Association of the District, who said he represented the Federation of Citizens Associations, filed with the commission what he said was a safeguarding resolution adopted by his association opposing elimination of consents. Sufficient time had not been had to study full effect of the proposed elimination and the citizens associations did not wish to give up any rights they now had, he said.

"Had our zoning regulations been written five years later they would not have contained any consent provisions," Capt. Hugh P. Oram, executive officer of the commission said. "We were pioneers. These provisions were put in to safeguard all interests as we felt our way along. Similar provisions do not exist in the zoning laws of other places enacted subsequently."

Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, cited a decision of the Washington State Supreme Court holding that consent provisions were unconstitutional.

Amateur Night Contests Invade Capital Clubs

Entertainers Create New Acts; 'Fun Mistress' Arrives Here.

By Chanticleer.

The radio may have revived interest in the traditional "amateur night" in the last year or two, but the local nighteries are finding it an equally profitable device.

Club Amsterdam is the latest to go amateur. Every Friday night, as it were. Last week Cecile Antonetta carried off the honors, singing "Ciri-biri-bin." And second award went to Maxine Stebenan, a little tap dancer. And to make it a clean sweep for the femmes, Cleo Holman took third award for more tap dancing.

Curtis and Dubois are the feature of the floor show this week, in a sophisticated ballroom tango and rhumba routine. Beulah Cromwell is mistress of ceremonies for the fun—coming all the way from St. Louis.

The Amsterdam is at Fourteenth and Lamont streets, in case you haven't yet got around to paying it a visit. Verree new, as it were.

• • • •

Speaking of the radio, Chanel de Tomee, featured this week at Maryland Club Gardens, has made recent air appearances with Emory Deutsch and his orchestra at WOR and also featured on the "Gypsy Trail" with the same maestro. He's just back from the Folies Bergere in Paris . . . Peggy Faye is being presented the last few times this week at the Dude Ranch, so hurry, hurry. Peggy not only does her own eccentric dance specialties, but aids and abets Jimmy Staley and Dixie Dyer. Ralph Garron and his orchestra for the dancing.

The Russian Troika is shifting the routine of its stage shows somewhat. The most noticeable change is the difference of the acts, one from another. The pattern of opening and closing the show with acts of the same type has been abandoned. And this week you'll find new costumes, music, dances, etc . . . Los Ojedos, at the Madrillon, have two sure ways to win your approval: First, they dance those Mexican and Spanish peasant steps beautifully, and second, their costumes are well worth seeing.

The Earl Lindsey show at the Lotus is one offering that really comes direct from the Big Stem. It's called "Town Topics," with Gibbons and Adams, just returned from a South American tour. Bento Brothers and Rita, Rennie Reynolds and the Strickland orchestra provide a well-rounded performance . . . Beginning very soon now, Ramon's will feature dancing nightly, with Rudy Schramm and his orchestra.

They do say that the town's musicians credit Barnee, of the Shoreham, with having the keenest ear in the business. Shoreham patrons for three years have applauded his arrangements—which he can turn out at amazing speed.

Barnee is one of those fellows who studied violin—and plays the piano because he likes it although he never studied the instrument in his life. And Barnee's clientels being what it is, with ambassadors and diplomats in attendance, he studies the new foreign language recordings carefully and then favors the foreign cousins with tunes of their own countries. Oh, yes. Barnee's career was similar to the Violin-piano paradox. He studied law in college.

Around the Capital's Night Clubs

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

By Morgan Baker.

EVEN before the first investigator sets out from Capitol Hill for the special Senate Economy Committee to study plans for reorganizing the Federal Government, the House chimes in "Me Too!" Thus, with interest aroused the south wing to co-operate with the north wing of the Capitol to end duplication of work in the various departments and independent offices, sweeping results are expected from the investigation.

BAKER.

Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, who is chairman of the House Committee on Expenditures in the executive departments, expressed hope yesterday for the sucess of Senator Byrd's economy committee.

However, the Missourian voiced disappointment that the investigation will not be conducted jointly by both Houses.

"I don't know why the special committee wasn't made a joint one because after the Senate gets through with its investigation, even if they pass some reorganization legislation and it comes over to the House, there may be some members who will demand that another hearing on each point be given over here," he is reported to have said. "That would only be duplicating the work."

"As far as I am concerned," Cochran continued, "if they can get some good reorganization legislation passed in the Senate, I am willing to put it right through the House."

Establishment of the economy committee is no surprise to Federal employes. Blasts of the Liberty League, National Economy League and similar organizations have three-sheeted the Senate's action all over the country.

"The same thing happened three years ago," it is pointed out by E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes. "At that time severe reorganizations were effected in the service, with resulting hardship to a large number of employes. Naturally there will be considerable apprehension lest this occur again."

Babcock expressed confidence in the personnel of the Byrd committee and promised that the case of the Federal employe would be presented to the members as effectively as possible.

"In particular," the employe leader stressed, "we are concerned with the vital necessity for eliminating the the sort of thing that occurred three years ago—a fictitious removal of Civil Service status and protection for employes of agencies which were to be reorganized. This procedure was not only unfair, but extremely destructive to the moral in the Government service, and we hope reorganizations can be effected without any duplication of this extremely serious menace to the governmental efficiency."

The A. F. G. E., Babcock stressed, is vitally interested in the maintenance of governmental efficiency.

"It is probably not generally recognized that the opportunities for economy in the Government service through reduction of forces or elimination of agencies are much more limited than many persons, influenced by insistent propaganda, are disposed to believe. Figures collected by our organization indicate that the Postoffice Department employes 39 per cent of all Government employes, including the military establishments; that 42 per cent of all Government employes, including the armed forces, are engaged in activities due to past wars or preparation for future wars; and that only 19 per cent of all Government employes carry on the normal activities of the Government.

"Under the circumstances," Babcock continues, "it is upon this last relatively small group that the greatest pressure can be directed; but in view of the fact that practically every Government agency is sponsored by some large group or interest, such as agriculture, business, organized labor, it may not be so easy to eliminate the so-called 'unnecessary boards and commissions' the Economy Leaguers and Liberty Leaguers think.

Babcock added that the prior economy wave was conducted in secret; that decisions affecting the welfare of many workers were made in star chamber sessions.

"All this," he declared, "will presumably be changed now, for we have a capable and fair-minded committee to deal with, and the American Federation of Government Employes to represent Government workers before it.

Departmental Meeting.

The District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, will meet at the Hotel Hamilton at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

Chairman Ira Y. Bain (P), Internal Revenue, of the ways and means committee, announces plans for another New York trip to be sponsored by the department, on May 15. Members and friends of the federation will have the option of a two-day or three-day trip.

The Agriculture Fencing Club has changed its practice sessions to Monday nights at Roosevelt High Armory. The novice class is still open. For the advanced fencers practice is now under way with the dueling sword, under direction of Irven Naimen (F), room 2734, South Building.

Missourians Will Celebrate.

Diary Guest Tickets.

You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, "Bring on the Dames" and other acts; screen, Warnex Baxter in "The Prisoner of Shark Island"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Mae West and Victor McLaglen in "Klondike Annie"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Mala in "Last of the Pagans").

On the Air Today

A GROUP of radio veterans will celebrate the 500th Cities Service Concert tonight at WRC at 8. Graham McNamee, who announced the first programs for Cities Service, back in 1925, will be on hand with Edwin Franko Goldman, band leader, who played the first concerts.

It was in 1927 when Rosario Bourdon replaced the Goldman band, and in 1930 when Ford Bond took over the announcing. The Revelers joined the show in 1932. Shortly before Bond joined the production a slender, shy lyric soprano who had made quite a hit in Reinhardt's "The Miracle," joined the programs and Cities Service takes considerable pride in feeling that the name of Jessica Dragonette was made familiar to music lovers over the country through this program.

The program tonight will be made up of selections most frequently requested. Miss Dragonette sings "Song of India," Friml's "Valse Hugette" ("Vagabond King"), and "Alice Blue Gown."

The most frequently requested song of all, "Beautiful Blue Danube," will be played by the orchestra. The Revelers feature Frank Black's special vocal arrangement of Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor."

Today is the anniversary of Wendell Hall's radio debut—14 years ago. It was February 28, 1922, when the tall, red-head played a xylophone and sang in the studio of KYW, then located in Chicago, beginning an air career which reached one striking milestone with the composition of "It Ain't Goin' To Rain No More." Wendell never used his xylophone after the first broadcast. It cost $1 to have the instrument hauled to the studio, and $1 was a much bigger item in the "Red-Headed Musicmaker's" life in 1922 than today—with his own office in N. B. C.'s headquarters building in Chicago. He'll be heard tonight, WMAL, at 8:15.

• • • •

Highlights today:

Fred Waring: Features two new additions to troupe—Charles Newman, harmonica wizard, and Freye Peters, banjoist, WMAL, at 9:30.

Tim Healy: Anecdotes in eulogy of Martha Washington, WMAL, at 7:15.

Preview: Of "Country Doctor," with Jean Hersholt, in "Hollywood Hotel," WJSV, at 9. Also Dick Powell, Frances Langford and others.

"Breath of Life": Story of discovery of oxygen, an original radio play, sponsorship of G. W. U., WMAL, at 7:30.

"Follow the Fleet": New flicker tunes featured by Red Nichols orchestra, and James Melton, "Prom," WMAL, at 8:30.

Secretary Hull: Discusses Latin American policies in "The Other Americas," WMAL, at 10:30.

• • • •

Somehow I feel a little sad when I realize that within another two or three weeks the now delightful melodies from "Follow the Fleet" will be dinning in our ears as screamingly as the majority of its worthy predecessors ultimately did. If a song really strikes the public fancy, it wears just about six weeks these days—and then for another six weeks it causes the citizenry to break down and weep.

Two notable exceptions to what usually happens to a smash hit are "Sing an Old Fashioned Song to a Young Sophisticated Lady" and "Saddle Your Blues to a Wild Mustang." They are requiring a longer period to catch the public's fancy, apparently, and hence they are not yet overplayed. No doubt they will be.

• • • •

Federal Loans Topic Of Talk by Szymczak

"Direct Loans to Industry by the Federal Reserve Banks" was the subject of a lecture given by M. F. Szymczak, at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel yesterday.

Szymczak, a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve Board, also described the workings of the Federal Reserve System and their connections with private industry. Commodore C. S. Swink, president of the International Cosmopolitan Club, was present at the meeting which was presided over by Emory Galliher.

David W. Griffith Sues for Divorce

La Grange, Ky., Feb. 27 (AP).—David Wark Griffith, veteran movie producer, has at last decided to free himself legally from the wife with whom he has not lived for 25 years.

His divorce petition brought in this Kentucky town where he was born 56 years ago, was to have been heard today, but Circuit Court was busy with another case and Griffith's suit went over until tomorrow.

The suit, filed here last December 26, was brought under a Kentucky law providing for divorce when couples have not lived together for more than five years. It smiply stated that he and Linda Griffith, an actress, had separated in 1911 after having been married in Boston in 1905 and that he had maintained a legal residence here for more than five years. It added that she was not a resident of Kentucky and that her whereabouts was unknown.

Ice Swirls Down Potomac

Maryland Is Dark Horse; Hopes Are Pinned On Three Battlers.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 27.—Forty-four fighting men, carrying dynamite in their padded fists and dreaming championship aspirations, were converging on this ivy-covered old Virginia town tonight, ready for the opening bell of a two-day battle royal that is the annual Southern Conference boxing championships—one of Dixie's most glamorous sports spectacles.

Cream of the crop, culled from eight schools, and every one a prospective titleholder, they will climb through the ropes tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the preliminary matches that will see some hopes shattered, some furthered, possibly by a single punch, or a split second.

Virginia and Duke are pretourney favorites, with the Cavaliers boasting a slight edge in the wagering. Maryland, despite a miserable season record and the presence of two rookies in its seven-man line-up, is the dark horse—an extremely dark horse, with an outside chance of springing the greatest surprise in tournament history. Virginia has won five consecutive championships, and a total of six in nine years of competition.

Individual Favorites.

Individual favorites who are being vociferously touted by their supporters are Lorenzo Taylor, South Carolina, 115 pounds; Tom Birmingham, Maryland, 125 pounds; Jack Kneipp, Duke, 135 pounds; Danny Farrar, Duke and Bill McClung, Virginia, 145 pounds; Wilton Mann, Duke, and Maynard Harlow, Virginia, 155 pounds; Al Mann, Duke, and Mortin Caplin, Virginia, 165 pounds; Ray Matulewicz, Duke, light-heavyweight, and Fred Cramer, Virginia, heavyweight.

Maryland's hopes will be put to an early test tomorrow night when Johnny Gormley, light-heavyweight, faces Ray Haskell, representing South Carolina. The Old Liner is one of four men entered in his class. Only four are entered in the heavyweight division, also and to facilitate the handling of Saturday's program all eight men will fight tomorrow. The survivors will have it out Saturday night for the championships.

Even earlier than Gormley, however, will Ed Shegogue, Terrapin bantamweight, be sent to the firing line. He meets heavily backed Lorenzo Taylor, of South Carolina. Shegogue does not appear to have much chance of winning, but Coach Jack Harmony is confident that the youngster will give a good account of himself if he doesn't score an upset.

Maryland's Hope.

Much of Maryland's hopes, I might say all of their hopes, depend on "Spike" Webb, who is fighting in the 135-pound class; Ivan Nedomatsky, lightweight champion, who has moved upstairs into the 145-pound class, and Tom Birmingham, featherweight. All three have been disappointed thus far in duel competition, but Harmony feels that they will find themselves in the tournament.

Mike Lombardo, 155-pounder, can win if he doesn't encounter a man with more reach, as he probably will. The Terps have elected to forfeit in the middleweight division

Public Golf Links Not Yet Playable

Two Courses Open Next Week, Mackenzie Back.

In answer to phone calls from hundreds of golfers, Ed Burns, manager at Rock Creek, and Harry Graham, manager at East Potomac, stated last night that the two municipal golf courses are as yet not playable.

"The snow and ice have thawed out at Rock Creek and East Potomac," Burns said, "but we can not definitely say when the courses will be open. It may be next week, or maybe the following week. We will let the newspapers know about it."

Expected home by the week-end is Roland Mackenzie, Congressional professional, who is returning from his winter post, Ponte Vedre Club, Jacksonville Beach, Fla., with his wife, and 19-year-old Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional.

Greenkeepers claim that it will be at least ten more days before the private club courses will be ready for play, provided there is no more snow.

Annual Event Awarded To Capital Skeet Club

The National Capital Skeet Club again has been awarded the annual North-South skeet-shooting championships to be held this year, May 23 and 24. Third year in succession that the event has been conducted, it is expected to attract the All-American team, captained by Frank Kelly, of New Jersey, to the local club's course near Bethesda, Md.

President William Leech and Director Larry Williams of the National Capital Club are issuing invitations to the secretaries of numerous skeet clubs. It is expected the 1936 entry list will exceed that of last year's meet when more than 100 registered shooters participated. Most of American's foremost marksmen are probable entries.

Heroes of the Day's News from the Nats' Training Camp in Orlando

This Morning . . .

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.

AT THIS writing, Roberto Estallella, the bow-legged kid from Cuba, is the problem child of the Washington training camp.

Manager Bucky Harris has no more idea of what Estallella's status with the Nats is or will be than he has of the Einstein theory. He cannot yet decide whether the Cuban is a hopeless case as an aspiring big leaguer or a genuine diamond in the rough.

POVICH.

At the thought of installing Estallella as the Nats' regular third baseman, Harris shudders. But when he begins to reflect upon the power that the Cuban personifies at the plate he begins to devise ways and means of getting him into the Washington club's line-up somewhere. If Estallella didn't hold out such promise of developing into something of a slugging sensation, he'd be on his way back to Harrisburg right now.

Harris has grave doubts that Estallella will ever develop into a third baseman. As a fielder he cannot be mentioned in the same inhalation with Buddy Lewis or Cecil Travis. Hard-hit balls handcuff him and he's not overly sure-handed on the slow ones. He's no cat-like figure around the bag anyway, but, with the arm he possesses, he can knock 'em down, pick 'em up and still get the balls over to first base only a split second behind the best infielders.

Harris was saying today that he would hate to part with anybody who possesses the Cuban's throwing arm. Senor Roberto can, indeed, sling that ball. If there's a stronger arm in the American League, it belongs only to Jimmy Foxx. And there is little fault to be found with Roberto's accuracy on throws. Yet the Cuban is still a joke as a third baseman for the simple reason that he can't play third base and shows little promise of developing.

But the Nats can use the little Cuban's big bat. Harris and Washington fans saw enough of him last fall to accept him as something of a star slugger. That .320 batting average he compiled with the Nats in his brief trial is no myth. All of his hits were solid wallops and were he not robbed of others by sensational catches his batting figure would hover around the .400 mark.

He's the most powerful slugger on the Washington club whenever he connects solidly. The home run that he socked over both decks of the Shibe Park grandstand last year was a feat that no other Washington player has ever approached. In his 185-pound, 5-foot-8-inch form, Estallella boasts a great concentration of power. With forearms that would make a sissy out of Tarzan, he can swing late on a ball and still send it sailing.

And he needs to make no apologies for his eye at the plate. If there's a better waiter on the Washington club than the Cuban, then that honor belongs to Buddy Myer alone. Difficult to pitch to as a result of his squatness, he is not only a good but a willing waiter, with the courage to gamble on his eye even when the count is against him. In his lighter moments, Harris likes to envision Estallella as the Nats' lead-off man.

It will all wind up, no doubt, in Estallella's being instructed to concentrate his ambitions on an outfield berth. The Nats could use another right-handed hitting outfielder; in fact, they could use anybody with Estallella's power. But Harris is ready to abandon all hope for the Cuban as an infielder. He might learn how to play the outfield. He will never be a third baseman. And that throwing arm will be no mean asset whenever Roberto begins to concentrate on outfielding.

In Short—

Nobody apparently told Estallella that Buddy Lewis was to be the Nats' 1936 third baseman. In fielding practice today, the Cuban motioned for Lewis to move over while he took a turn at playing third base. Harris will advise the Cuban tomorrow that he is an outfielder. Harris today displayed sudden interest in Ken Raffenberger, a young southpaw from New York who had been overlooked since training began. Dick Lanahan, the Washington youth who had dominated the pocket billiard play among the Nats, lost his championship last night when he fell afoul of Estallella in a special match. Kendall Chase continues to be the fair-haired lad whenever Clark Griffith mentions the prospects of his rookie pitchers. His curiosity aroused by Walter Johnson's feat of throwing a silver dollar across the Rappahannock, Bucky Harris today revealed that he had quietly tested his own arm along those lines before leaving Washington. At Griffith Stadium one morning he stood at home plate and heaved one of the silver cartwheels 340 feet by actual measurement toward the right-centerfield fence, a distance that surpassed Johnson's throw. Harris says any outfielder, whose arm is attuned to the longer throws, could out-heave any pitcher who ever lived in a throw for distance.

Solters Agrees to Sign.

St. Louis, Feb. 27 (AP).—Vice President L. C. McEvoy, of the St. Louis Browns, announced tonight Julius Solters, slugging outfielder, has agreed with the club on a salary and will sign his 1936 contract immediately

Reds Beat Islanders.

Ponce, Puerto Rico, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The Cincinnati Reds defeated the Ponce locals, 8 to 2, in an exhibition game today. The Reds bunched four runs in the fifth inning with two out after the local team had taken a one-run lead with a score in the fourth.

Dunn's Dollar Is Short in Rappahannock Test, So His Secretary Throws One Across River

By Wilbur Jennings.

A Staff Correspondent.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Feb. 27.—The Bronx cheer poured loud and lustily from throats of 100 Southerners and, gathering in volume, rolled across the muddy waters of the Rappahannock River to the ears of Congressman Aubert C. Dunn, 6-foot Mississippian, who a few minutes before had thrown three silver dollars into the Rappahannock in an attempt to duplicate the hurling of George Washington and Walter Johnson.

A small crowd followed Dunn to the ferry landing on the Washington boyhood farm while the larger crowd gathered on the opposite side of the stream in hope that one of the dollars would get across.

While the coatless Congressman stood ankle deep in mud on the river bank, a light rain beating him in the face, W. B. F. Cole, member of the Chamber of Commerce, handed him a silver dollar stating that he hoped it would get across.

"I hope so," replied the Congressman. And then dropping formality after slipping a couple of times in the mud Congressman Dunn went into his windup dance.

"Boys," he said, "it looks like some toss to me."

The Mississippian let go. The dollar was 30 feet short of its mark much to the disappointment of the group on the opposite bank.

Twice again Congresman Dunn sent a flashy dollar out over the stream to be greeted with a "plunk" as it fell into the river and echoes of the Southerners "razzberries" on the opposite bank reached him.

"Boys," said Mr. Dunn, turning to those about him, "I cannot tell a lie, it didn't get across." But that was obvious. While good-natured jostling went the rounds, the Congressman was urged to toss some more of the chamber of commerce's dollars.

"I'm sticking to the rules," he said. "It was a three-throw proposition and I am not going to throw but three times."

Previous to the throw he had warmed up for 15 minutes with a baseball and catcher's mitt that he had brought along. His secretary, Lawrence Bouligny, was on the receiving end.

Secretary Bouligny accepted the chamber's offer to throw away more dollars. The first three dollars landed in the river and the fourth went into the bank below the high-water mark. A long-armed youngster fished around in the mud for a moment and then came up with it. With both Congressman and secretary failing at coin-tossing, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired, who came along, attempted to drive a golf ball across.

First, Gen. Fries used a five iron. The ball sailed into the air and also into the Rappahannock. The same result was noted with a three iron.

Desperately, he pulled out a driver. Teed up the ball and sent it sailing into an oil company's tanks on the opposite bank. A tremendous applause greeted the drive.

Others in the party who came to see the Congressman do his stuff were Col. J. J. Johnson, U. S. A.; Sidney Wigransky, magazine writer; Russell, Minniece, confidential secretary to Mrs. Dunn, and Don Gingary, Representative from Pennsylvania.

2,500 Fans See Joe Cox Toss Kalmikoff

They didn't do right by Kalmy
When he came by Washington.
They yanked his whiskers from his face
And made of him the fun.

They left him on the canvas,
A noble Tartar downed;
And Kalmy wept so bitterly
That he darn near drowned.

MOORE ANON.

By George Considine.

AFTER exhibiting every facial expression in the books, Sergei Kalmikoff, the stupendous Siberian, bowed to Kansas City Joe Cox in the feature match of the weekly wrestling show last night at the Turner Arena. The farce consumed 30 minutes and was witnessed by some 2,500 spectators.

Just how Cox put on the finishing touches probably never will be known. It seems that Sergei had just returned from a walking tour of the ringside when the Kansan registered his most hostile-sounding sneer. Well, Sergei stifled a yawn, assumed a horizontal position and grunted the Vladivostokian equivalent of "Uncle!"

Strides and Struts.

Throughout the half-hour Kalmikoff spent his time majestically stalking, striding and strutting about the rostrum. At times he would pause, leer ominously, stroke his whiskers, pass the time of day with Referee Bennah Bortnick and then continue his strutting 'round and 'round.

After Cox had taken several innocuous rabbit punches, he broke the monotony by scaling the mountainous slopes of the whiskered one and clamping on a headlock. Sergei was outranged at such misbehavior and turned to the customers for sympathy. But, alas, there were only boos.

Crocodile Tears.

So effective w[illegible] the Siberian's pantomime on one occasion that one of the ringsiders [illegible] him a handkerchief to catch the crocodile tears. Imagine the customer's embarrassment when there weren't any tears at all. Everybody had a good laugh over it. And the farce continued.

The evening wasn't a total loss for Kalmy, however, for he managed to tear Referee Bortnick's shirt off. Bennah couldn't see the humor and helped Cox to lift the elephantine maiman out of the ring. Having returned, he obviously decided that

Miller 7-5 Choice To Defeat Sarron

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 27.—Champion Freddie Miller tonight was made a 7-5 favorite to retain his featherweight crown here in a match Monday night with Petey Sarron.

Newspaper sports desks, however, were divived. They gave three predictions:

Miller, who outpointed Nel Tarleton in 1934 at Liverpool to bring the championship, tonight called himself an easy victor. But Sarron, veteran of 12 long years in the ring, said he was going to shoot the works.

Two 'White Hopes' Vie In Guard Boxing Show

Two "White Hopes" will perform on the National Guard boxing show to be given at Turner's Arena March 4.

White Hope No. 1 is Jimmy King, 6 foot 2, former Tech High football star. He will meet Earnest Walker, the Navy Yard heavyweight who won the novice heavyweight championship in the recent Golden Gloves tournament.

In other bouts on the card, Willie Fearey will return to the wars after a year's layoff, facing one Ace O'Brien, of Richmond. Lou Gevinson, 126-pound champion of the District, will face some stiff opposition in the person of John Routson.

'I'm Not Holdout,' Asserts Whitehill

Leaves for Camp Sunday; Expects No Trouble.

By the Associated Press.

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 27.—Earl Whitehill, ace southpaw of the Washington Senators, stopped his golf game with Willis Hudlin, of the Cleveland Indians, here today to declare he is not a holdout.

"I'm not a holdout, but a holderon," Whitehill laughed. "I've lost 10 pounds of surplus avoirdupois and am in fine shape. I'm leaving Sunday for camp, where I'm sure the difference between me and the club will be ironed out."

Hudlin said he was in top shape and would leave Sunday also for the Cleveland camp.

Miss Livengood Is Beaten by Patty Berg

Minneapolis Girl Advances With 5-and-3 Victory; Mrs. Hill Bows.

By the Associated Press.

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 27. Patty Berg won the battle of the school girls today, defeating Hilda Livengood, 17-year-old Illinois State champion, 5 up and 3 to play, in the quarter-finals of the Southern Atlantic women's championship golf tournament.

The Minneapolis redhead played even par on nine holes, went a single stroke over par on three and collected three birdies to win the match with relentless regulation figures.

The turning point came on the second stroke of the first hole. Hilda outdrove Patty with a 200-yard rifle shot off the tee, but found a bad lie, and her No. 2 iron shot failed to rise. Patty's first tee shot was her poorest of the day, getting only 165 yards, but she slapped her second on the green on the 324-yard hole, and took two putts for a par 4.

Drives 225 Yards.

Miss Berg's most brilliant play today was on the 440-yard dog leg sixth. She drove 225 yards, took a chance and sent a long second over the water. Her second stopped 10 yards short of the green, and she chipped to within 3 feet, then took one putt for a birdie 4. Hilda tried to play the water safe and required a 6.

Today's upset was scored by Miss Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., who matched birdie with birdie, or a birdie against par to defeat Mrs. Opal S. Hill, veteran Kansas Citian, 4 up and 3 to play.

Miss Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., the defending champion, and favorite to face Patty Berg in the final Saturday, was 1 down to Mrs. L. K. Zech, of Chicago, at the turn with a shaky 41 going out. Marion played the next seven holes 3 under par to win, 4 and 2. Her opponent in the semifinals tomorrow will be Miss Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines, Iowa, who won over Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., today, 5 and 4.

Patty Berg at 18 Put on Cup Team

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 27.—Patty Berg, the Mineapolis wonder-girl golfer, achieved international-stature today when she and seven others were named to the Curtis Cup team which will meet a British women's team in Scotland May 6-7.

At 18, freckle-faced Patty becomes the youngest American feminine internationalist in history. As a member of the team she takes her place with Glenna Collett Vare; Charlotte Glutting, of South Orange, N. J.; Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City; Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky.; Mrs. Louis Cheney, of Los Angeles; Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, Tex. Mrs. Goldthwaite is the former Aniela Gorczyca.

Al but Miss Berg have been members of one or both of the previous teams in the biennial series which was launched at Wentworth, England, four years ago and resumed at Washington in 1934. The United States won the cup at the inaugural and successfully defended it two years ago.

Jake Powell, Cuban Star With Bat

Floyd Perryman Fails to Impress; Wynne On View Today.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 27.—The drudgery of calisthenics and the conventional weight-reducing work gave way to a bit of fun for the Washington ball players today. With willing and eager hands they laid hold of the batting cage, dragged it into position and partook of the unalloyed joy of banging their bats against some pitching.

The pitching wasn't much to look at, being provided by two Washington sandlotters, Joe Sullivan and Fotch Mathias, and big Frank Petticolas, but rusty batting eyes didn't produce such hot hitting, either. There were two notable exceptions, however.

Outfielder Jake Powell, now bigger and stronger than in 1935, and the irrepressible Robert Estallella, whose underslung chassis is the embodiment of power, evoked a round of gasps from the 200 spectators in the stands as they laid against the ball.

Pirouetting against one of Sullivan's offerings, the Cuban keed met the ball on the nose and sent it rollicking deep into center field for a smash that would have been a home run in any park in the big league circuit. Obviously pleased with his effort, Estallela flung his bat high in the air and shouted at Manager Bucky Harris, "Ho-kay. No?"

Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis were hitting the ball sharply when they weren't whiffing or popping up, but Harris shuddered at the prospect of going through the season with the kind of hitting that was on display today.

Perryman Unimpressive.

He was not impressed, either, by the batting form of young Floyd Perryman, who he had hoped would show some promise as a hitter. The young catcher, whose cockiness and confidence in handling the ball in infield practice had led Harris to hope that he might develop into a tolerable receiver and a much-needed right-hand hitter, was apparently weak at the plate.

Harris didn't like Perryman's stance and the rookie pitching had the lad quite baffled, but the Nats' manager is making allowances for the early stage of training in deference to the .373 average that Perryman amassed in a Kentucky league.

Wynne to Perform.

Tomorrow, Harris will take a look at young Huck Wynne, the prize Washington sandlotter, in action behind the bat. Impressed

THE SCOTCH THAT CIRCLES THE GLOBE

Critics agree in CAIRO and CHICAGO

From the Middle West to the Near East, the standard for Scotch is McCallum's. Every drop of this famous whisky is like every other drop—and every drop is eight years old. That's why the seasoned drinker of Scotch specifies "McCallum's Perfection" when he puts in his order. He knows he can depend on a whisky that has the traditions of the House of McCallum behind it. Imported only in convenient oval bottles, taped and sealed, with a useful jigger top for measuring spots.

G-Man Fives Face Rockville and Ramblers in Tourney Tonight

Garfield and Mt. Rainier Tie Again

Girls' Teams All Even at 19 Points; Typos and Leland Winners.

THE G-Men will take over the Heurich gym, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest, tonight in the District A. A. U.-Washington Post unlimited basketball championship.

Armed with machine-gun scoring eyes, two groups of Bureau of Investigation men will fire hot leather at the hoops tonight in an effort to ensnarl teams representing Rockville and the Ramblers.

At 8:30 o'clock the Investigation Blues will battle Rockville, and an hour later the Investigation Whites will take on the Ramblers.

145-Pounders Clash.

Opening the program will be two 145-pound teams, the Twin Oaks Black Hawks, defending A. A. U. champions, and Georgetown Boys Club, which will meet at 7:30.

There was so much good basketball talent at the Bureau of Investigation that the boys decided to split up in two divisions—just as G-Men do when they go after public enemies.

For the G-Men Whites tonight's game will mark their debut in the championship. The Blues already have played, having trimmed Knights of Columbus, 39-20.

The Blues will rely on such players as Colley, Fischer, Robinson, White, Irwin, Sells, Bethel and Thompson.

Rockville won easily last week, defeating National Capital Parks, 44-21, while the Ramblers upset the dope by taking the Flying Eagles, 39-35.

Third Round at Stake.

If the Blues and Whites win, they will join Rinaldi, Delaware & Hudson, George Washington Freshmen and Resettlement in the third round of the A. A. U. championship.

In the smaller classes the schedule follows:

130-pound class—8, Northeast Boys Club vs. Langley at Washington Boys Club; 9, Macfarland Young Mens Club vs. Eighth Street Business Men at Washington Boys Club.

There were two exciting games in the senior girls' contests at Heurich's gym last night.

Those plucky little girls from Mount Rainier, 15 and 16 year old high school players, put up another beautiful fight, battling the favored Garfield team to a 19-all tie—their second tie game in as many weeks. They were replaying a 12-12 tie of last Thursday. These two ties set a new A. A. U. tournament record.

It took some courageous shooting by Louise Garilli and Lucille Rocker, Mount Rainier forwards, to tie the score. Behind 9-7 at the half, 16-10 with a few minutes to go, the Misses Garilli and Rocker scored quick goals to cause another deadlock. Miss Garilli rang up 12 points to tie Miss Davis, of Garfield, for high-point honors.

Typos Triumph.

United Typewriter Girls had to battle for dear life before emerging victoriously, 20-18, over Rockville. It was the Typos' twenty-second straight victroy. Only the expert last-minute shooting of Virginia Jones saved the Typos from a possible tie and defeat.

The Typos led, 14-10, at the half; Margaret Bennett, Rockville forward, gave a splendid exhibition of all-around passhing and shooting, scoring 12 points for the Montgomery County girls. Miss Jones, who scored the winning basket for the Typos, rang up 14 points.

In the opener, Leland A. C., of Bethesda, Md., trimmed the Jewish Community Center, 44-17, Miss Lee scoring 28 points.

Heurich to Play Bridgeton Sunday

Bridgeton Pros, leaders in the Eastern basketball league, will be the Heurich Brewers' foes Sunday afternoon in the Twenty-sixth and D street gym.

The Jersey boys have already defeated the Brewers once this season and it naturally would be vindication for the locals if they could reverse the tables this time.

Fort Washington and Senate Beer will vie in the opening attraction at 1:30. Being Army pay day Saturday, one can easily understand why cagey Manager McDonald scheduled the Fort basketers.

Admission will be 40 cents. The feature game will begin at 3:30.

Crown Is Clinched By John Marshall

Alexandria, Feb. 27.—John Marshall High School, of Richmond, clinched the central division championship of the Virginia State Athletic and Literary League here tonight by drubbing George Washington High, of Alexandria, 43 to 29. It was the Richmond school's eighth straight conference victory against no defeats.

Can't Beat Hours, Huck Wynne States

He hopes to stay in this uniform.

(This is the third of a series of articles by Huck Wynne, Washington Post Baseball Association player, whose trial with the Nationals is being financed by The Post. Wynne will describe his experiences at camp.)

By Huck Wynne.

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 27.—Another thing I've learned about working at a big league baseball training camp—you can't beat the hours.

A fellow's time is his own soon after the noon hour, when "Bucky" Harris calls it a day for the squad out on Tinker Field.

You put in about two hours of actual work in the morning and you're excused until the next morning at 9:30. We catch the bus for the ball park. But a couple of the fellows have learned that Harris' 9:30 means exactly 9:30. If you miss that bus then you're in for a 2-mile walk to the park, 'cause the Orlando taxis, besides being expensive, are rare.

And if a fellow can't find entertainment in Orlando in the afternoon it's his own fault. There are two golf courses within a mile of the hotel and the Chamber of Commerce has arranged for passes for all the players. And there's supposed to be fish—bass and perch—in most of Orlando's 32 lakes.

But, unless you're nuts about golf, you're not very anxious to go strolling around any long courses after you're through with the morning workout. If a guy's tongue isn't hanging out by then he's a pretty good physical specimen.

They put up that batting cage today and you never saw such a rush for bats. I got myself a Goose Goslin model, but I spent most of a half hour trying to get up at the plate.

You see they have an unwritten rule around big league clubs that the rookies are the last guys who are entitled to go up there and bat. By the time the regulars in camp took their wallops we rookies were able to get only one turn at bat.

It wasn't even decent pitching that we faced, but it made a lot of us look bad. The pitchers, of course, aren't supposed to be hitters, but all the catchers and infielders in camp were trying to knock the spots off the ball with not much luck.

I hit a couple on the nose if I do say so myself. But it was just my luck to have both Bucky Harris and Mr. Griffith looking the other way when I connected.

Here's hoping they are paying attention tomorrow—and that I sock a few.

Baltimore Five Victor Over Wilson

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 27.—University of Baltimore added another victory to its string at the expense of Wilson Teachers, of Washington, this afternoon. The score was 37 to 29, achieved only by dint of earnest effort on the part of the Bees in the second half.

Store League Lead Taken By Kann

Lansburgh Paves Way by 3-Game Win; Takoma Teams Are Tied.

THE champion Lansburg & Brothers team created somewhat of a turmoil in the Department Store League last night at the Recreation alleys, outclassing the Woodward & Lothrop team three games to drop them into second place and enabling S. Kann Sons to usurp the throne left open by Woodward & Lothrop's defeat by chalking up two wins over Credit Bureau. The new leaders reached the top despite strenuous opposition on the part of Dave Williams, who cracked the maples for a top set of 404. Vic Riston's 157 featured for the victors.

Palais Royal returned to form in tripping Young's Shoe three times Jeleff's took two from Hecht Co., and Guy Curran gained the edge over Raleigh Haberdasher.

The leadership of the Takoma Suburban League remained deadlocked after the 12-team organization went into action last night at the Takoma drives. Happy Five, in a tie for the top position with Stewart Brothers, No. 1, succeeded in edging out a two-game victory over Pioneer Press and the Photographers barely nosed out the Brooks Shade Shop, the latter's only win resulting from a high game of 602. Charlie Carl, kingpin of the suburban drives, chipped the maples for a 142 game to feature Happy Five's win.

In the other matches, Sarco took two from Lamar & Wallace, Stewart Brothers, No. 3, whitewashed Minton & Baker, Youngblood Hardware upset Takoma A. C. twice, and Victor Flower Shop topped Fritz Billiards.

Near-star bowlers are signing on the dotted line for the Ollie Pacini and Dutch Sherbahn sweepstakes, which get under way tomorrow night. The former event will take place at the Northeast Temple drives, and the first block of the latter is scheduled for the Takoma runways. Entries for both events will be received up to starting time.

G. W. High Five Meets W.-L. Tonight

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Feb. 27.—George Washington High invades Arlington County tomorrow night for a game with the Washington-Lee High basketball team. In a game at Alexandria earlier in the season the Presidents easily disposed of their neighborhood rivals for State honors.

Episcopal High School must defeat Woodberry Forest here Saturday afternoon if it is to stay in the running for the State prep school title.

Bob Tow, Alexandria's entry in the Chicago "white hope" heavyweight boxing tournament, will resume action against Stanley Ketchell, of Detroit, tomorrow in the semifinals. Saturday Tow will go to Buffalo, N. Y., for an engagement.

Elaborate plans are being made to make the George Washington University varsity basketball team's appearance here Monday night in the George Washington High School gym a gala athletic event. The Columbia Firemen, who are to oppose the Colonials, have a series of novel acts arranged for Alexandria fans.

Joe Cox Winner Over Kalmikoff

the customers were getting bored anyway so he called it a night.

In the semifinal Emil Dusek won a roundly booed decision over Sure Mike Mazurki after 25 minutes of bristling action. Palpably fouled with a knee-butt-in-the-tummy, Mazurki failed to gain his feet at the count of ten.

Never has there been a local wrestling match to equal the scientific merit of the Hal Rumberg-Scotty McDougal 30-minute draw. One minute more and the aged Scotchman would probably have given up under the pressure of a leg-lock, which Rummy held from the 25-minute mark.

Damascus High came through with its second victory in the intra-Montgomery County series yesterday by winning a slow contest from Poolesville, 19 to 10, on the Damascus court. The game was a windup for the county schools and pushed Poolesville into the cellar position, with the victors a notch above.

Race Drivers Devise Own Slang

By Art Wright

(Contest Board, American Automobile Association.)

THE great American game seems to be trying to talk freely in the presence of your neighbor without letting him know what you're talking about. The more you make him believe that he fully understands, although he has no conception of what you're talking about, the more successful you are at the game.

Especially is this true around automobile racing tracks. In this day and age of mechanical enlightment, it is doubtful if anyone still thinks a super-charger is an extravagant wife with unlimited credit, but many of the terms in common use by the benzine buggy boys are as incomprehensible to the layman as Sanskrit.

Supposing you were turned loose around a modern track and wandered over to the pits where the "jockeys" are making adjustments on their cars. Listen carefully and you may pick up a bit of this strange lingo—and, on the other hand, you may be forced to send for an interpreter to save yourself embarrassment.

If a mechanic should ask you to hand him that "bucket," don't ask him if he wants water in it. They do not put water in pistons.

If mention is made of a "galloping iron," no reference is being made to the usual Monday pressing instrument. To the racing fraternity, a galloping iron is a connecting rod.

You've been told that you can't bounce a snowball and it is better not to try it with a "grease ball" as most mechanics won't bounce at all. Around the track not all bologney is meat or hokum—it is the nom du slang for small tires. Regular sized tires are "hoops."

A "gilhooley" isn't a new kind of Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers dance nor the Irish copper who guards the box office, but is the name given to the dizzy capers made by a race car in righting itself after going into a spin. Simians are in no manner connected with "monkey tracks," which are small speedways. And a "bull pen" is not the headquarters of a confirmed Annanias, but the name given a small dirt track.

Not every "nut" has a kernel or is a crackpot. In the speed game, the nut is the amount of money invested in promoting an event.

"Crate—a big race car.
"Balloon foot"—slow driver.
"Jockey"—Driver.
"Shocks"—shock absorbers.
"Unraveled"—motor running at its fastest.
"Job"—a good looking race car.
"Lead foot"—fast driver.
"Pot"—carburetor.
"Lead"—ethyl fluid.
"Cogs"—gears.
"Unload"—get out of a moving race car before it crashes.
"Jalopey"—a small race car.
"Blower"—supercharger.
"Gunning it"—speeding up.
"Go fast"—gasoline.
"Binders"—brakes.
"Kissing"—hit a wall or guard rail.

Ace Cage Fives In Tourney at Glens Falls

Eastern, Defending Champion, to Face Stern Rivals in April.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Feb. 27.—With Eastern High, of Washington, D. C., defending champion, officially entered, the teams committee of the Eastern States scholastic basketball tournament is studying the records of other outstanding teams throughout the East.

More than a score of powerful high, prep and parochial schools are being considered. Among them are several previous champions in the local classic, the seventeenth edition of which is scheduled for April 2, 3 and 4.

Brown Prep, of Philadelphia, runner-up last year, losing to Eastern High by a 43-29 score, again is among the leading contenders for one of the coveted bids. The Brown team is rated much stronger than last year.

Others Well Liked.

Seeking to represent Metropolitan New York is La Salle Academy of Manhattan, undefeated in Catholic high school league competition, Mount Pleasant High of Schenectady, unquestionably the strongest club in northeastern New York State, is also well liked.

Other strong contenders include Chelsea, Mass., High, three times winner of the Massachusetts State championship; Christian Brothers Academy, of Syracuse, N. Y., York Collegiate Institute, of York, Pa.; Washington Irving School, of Tarrytown, N. Y.; Amsterdam, N. Y. High, and Saratoga Springs, N. Y. High.

Wisconsin Gridiron Job May Go to Pat Holmes

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Oak Park, the world's largest village and proud of it, may send another high school football coach up to big time.

Well founded reports were circulated today that Glen (Pat) Holmes, "wonder coach," of Oak Park, a Chicago suburb with 65,000 persons probably would be offered the big job of succeeding Dr. Clarence W. Spears and leading the University of Wisconsin football teams back to their former heights.

Holmes, an alumnus of Wisconsin and freshman coach for the Badgers during the seasons of 1926, 1927 and 1928, admitted he had heard such reports, but denied any Wisconsin official had given him an offer.

Womer Talks Over Chances

Columbus and Brooklyn In Ring

THE battling barristers of Columbus University end their 1936 boxing season tonight at Turner's Arena, where they meet Brooklyn College, reputedly one of the smartest collegiate ring teams in and around New York City, at 8:30 o'clock.

Striving for their eighteenth consecutive victory over five years of competition, the Navigators are meeting a team supposed to be even stronger than the powerful Miami and King College teams that showed here earlier in the campaign. Columbus won both matches after a furious debate, but if Brooklyn is better than those teams Coach Bobby Goldstein's charges will have their hands full tonight.

Two matches on the card are outstanding. Capt Leon Shub, making his farewell appearance in Columbus livery, meets Capt. Irving Gordon in the lightweight class, while Bobby Rawson will have it out with Jules Blumenstock. Shub is rated as one of the smartest and hardest-hitting lads in the college game, while Rawson has improved steadily this season. Their opponents, however, are regarded as prospective Olympic material.

Wilson to Fight Mills On Arena Card Monday

To round out a program of good preliminaries which are to support the Eddie Madder-Billy Nichy main event at Turner's next Monday night, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday signed Bob Wilson to do eight scheduled rounds of battle against Frankie Mills.

Bobby and Johnny Dean (no relation), will be other newcomers to make their bows on the preliminary card. Holder of the featherweight championship of Pennsylvania, Bobby Dean has been booked against Nick Lapatina, a protege of Dave Sonnenberg, Al Delaney's manager. Johnny Dean, a colorful North Carolina lightweight, will oppose Bobby Dechter, Natie Brown's protege.

Dnieper Wins Hialeah Feature

Stretch Bid Of Gelding Succeeds

Lancewood 3 Lengths Behind; Grog Fails After Early Pace.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 27.—Dnieper, Florida Derby candidate of Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, daughter-in-law of President J. E. Widener, earned new prestige by the decisive manner in which he defeated seven others of his age in the Gadsden purse here today. Covering the 7 furlongs in 1:23¾ without being seriously extended, the gelded son of Kiev won by three lengths and gave the impression that the Widener interests will not have to rely entirely upon the brilliant Brevity in the March 7 classic.

Willard Wilson's slow starting Lancewood ran over all but the winner to earn the place by a length. Mrs. Emil Denemark's Higher Cloud, favorite of the clockers, was a tired third, with Combahee, only entrant not named for the Florida Derby, fourth. Dnieper, smartly ridden by Wayne Wright, was a $4.10 for two choice. He carried 112 pounds.

Grog, topweight under 120 pounds, broke in front and set the fast pace until approaching the top of the stretch. He put away Go Home, which was making his seasonal bow, but stopped badly as Wright shot Dnieper around him to take command in smooth stride. Higher Cloud, kept close to the pace, made a brief bid halfway through the stretch, only to prove a bust. It remained for the plodding Lancewood to come along in the closing stages and offer what contention there was for the easy-going victor.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOOD OMEN, $16.70, $4.80, $3.20; BROAD MEADOWS, $2.80, $2.20; PORTDEN, $2.80.

GOOD OMEN, going in surprisingly improved fashion, sprinted into a clear lead when leaving the backstretch, met determined opposition from LUNSFORD, then rallied strongly in the final drive to withstand BROAD MEADOWS. Latter rated off the pace for the first half mile, slipped through on the inside entering the homestretch and was wearing the winner down gradually nearing the end. PORTDEN finished with good speed after being allowed to fall back soon after the break.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs; claiming. Purse, $800. For 2-year-olds. Start good (chute). Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:55½. Winner, Crescent Stable's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STORY TIME, $5.40, $3.40, $2.50; SQUARE, $8.50, $4.70; JACKIE D., $3.60.

STORY TIME, quick to begin and having good speed to assume command directly after the start, was strongly ridden while leading and held SQUARE safe in the late stages. SQUARE showed good speed to maintain a forward position in the early racing and continued courageously under a strong drive nearing the close. JACKIE D. swerved to the rail soon after the beginning, was hard urged and outstayed JINX.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:25. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. Charles S. Bromley's b. f. (3), by Stimulus—Lady Minnie. Trained by L. P. Harlan. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY MINETTA, $65.90, $22.50, $9.10; WEE WINK, $11.70, $6.90; FAKE, $4.70.

GAY MINETTA, showing startling improvement, worked her way into contention when swinging to the outside entering the homestretch, displaced the leaders without effort midway of the stretch run, then came away handily in the final drive. WEE WINK weathered her way between horses to enter a forward position when straightened into the homestretch and finished gamely to outstay FAKE. Latter was under severe pressure all the way and held on well.

FOURTH RACE—On mile; claiming. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward, maidens. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:53. Winner, A. J. Sackett's ch. f. (3), by Saxon—The Baroness. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:38.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JANE D., $17.70, $7.30, $5.30; PEACE MOVE, $4.70, $4.10; VITOFOL, $6.50.

JANE D., going in improved fashion, drove through on the inside midway of the backstretch, moved up a long lead when reaching the homestretch and held sway for the balance of the trip. PEACE MOVE, messed about, and permitted to drop far out of contention, moved up to her opponents at the final turn, but was taken wide thereafter and lost much ground. She held on well to outstay VITOFOL. Latter went prominently from the beginning, saved ground during the late stages and held gamely.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs; allowances. Gadsden purse, $1,100. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:24. Off at 4:27½. Winner, Mrs. Peter A. B. Widener's ch. g. (3), by Kiev—Nerva. Trained by Dan E. Stewart. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:23 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DNIEPER, $4.10, $3.10, $2.50; LANCEWOOD, $8.10, $4.70; HIGHER CLOUD, $3.70.

DNIEPER secured racing room on the inside until leaving the backstretch, went to the outside of the leaders when moving to the front, opened up a winning lead and held sway to the end. LANCEWOOD, favored by improved handling, worked his way up on the outside and finished with good energy. HIGHER CLOUD raced strongly while holding a forward position, saved a lot of ground entering the homestretch and was easily best of the others.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 4:59½. Winner, Brentwood Stable's dk. b. m. (5), by Hourless—Martin Bird. Trained by H. Greene. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILD TURKEY, $12.30, $5.90, $4.20; BALIOS, $4.40, $3.70; WINGED FLIGHT, $7.60.

WILD TURKEY, favored by improved handling, moved into the lead when obtaining room on the inside of the leaders nearing the final bend, then holding on strongly, held BALIOS safe at the end. BALIOS raced FIRST PIGEON into defeat, rallied gamely when shaken up, but could not menace the closing drive. WINGED FLIGHT came through on the inside entering the homestretch and finished willingly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:33. Winner, G. L. Weiss' ch. g. (7), by Spanish Prince II—Kitten. Trained by Lyman A. Brush. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL PUMA, $11.00, $4.80, $3.80; FUSCO, $3.40, $3.00; BUSTER BOY, $3.80.

EL PUMA, racing in his best form, moved up on the outside when improving his position, withstood a long drive gamely and was up in the last few strides. FUSCO recovered quickly after going to his knees at the break, entered contention at the final turn and closed strongly under a hard drive. BUSTER BOY ran down KINDRED SPIRIT, saved ground, but could not withstand the first two.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

This race track certainly believes in dividing profits with charity. In addition to giving the proceeds of one race each week to the welfare fund, Hialeah is going to stage a "charity day" program on March 9. All track officials will turn over their day's pay, and, in addition to getting the "mutuel take" and the admissions, charity will also profit from the various concessions. The Federal Government is co-operating by waiving the Federal tax of 10 per cent on admissions for the day. There is a possibility that the State of Florida will waive its tax for the day to swell the total. Bennings, Inc., had two winners today. If we don't get a break soon it looks as if I will have to stage a "charity day" for the Benningites. The clockers, including Mike, are beginning to respect the Bradley entry of Bow and Arrow and Baby Talk in the forthcoming Florida Derby. They worked together this morning and were clocked in 1:40 for a mile. Bradley won last year with Black Helen. BILL.

First race—M. J. Brennan is asked to carry 115 pounds here, but I don't believe the heavy impost will stop him in this company Arcaro probably will have the mount. Waterset is a possible surprise here. Dixie Princess is in light and is dangerous.

Second race—Peggy Porter is a sharp miss and one that will do a lot of running here. Maespur looks like the one to beat. Little Upset's last was a beaut and this one should be in the thick of it. This is a mad scramble, however, and not the place for the family jewels.

Third race—Fanle seems the best suited of these sprinters and I anticipate no mistakes. Permit and Jolly are in excellent shape and should fill the other money positions.

Fourth race—Jamboree picks up a steadying 110 pounds and goes a mile here. Seems to be the spot for a serious effort. Rushaway and Faust are ready and will be in there fighting it out if the top fellow makes mistakes. Clocker Mike says Flag Cadet, carrying 100 pounds, has a chance.

Fifth race—High Glee, with a mere 99-pound assignment, should take the main award in this excellent company. Rock X and Brannon seem to have an edge on the others.

Sixth race—Nalita J., with Nick Wall to do the booting, gets the call in this mile event. Building Trades is one that may prove an upsetter. Carefully groomed, this fellow will appreciate the conditions here. Aura to take care of the others.

Seventh race—I'm going to take another shot at Canimar. I can't forget that rousing race he ran at Tropical Park. This is his route. Palasa and Lady Couvin for the place and show.

Railroads Face NewProsperity, Wallace Says

Research Work Called the Chief Factor in Rehabilitation.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 27.—A bright picture as to the future of rail transportation in the United States largely resulting from an acceleration of research work started many years ago was painted by L. W. Wallace, director of equipment research, Association of American Railroads, in a speech here tonight before the Pittsburgh Railway Club.

"Statements have been made," said Mr. Wallace, "that the railroad industry is on the way out; that it has served its day; that its equipment, practice and performance are obsolete; that it is blind to developments of science and engineering, and that it is unconscious of and unconcerned with the circumstances and requirements of this period. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Instead, the railroad industry stands on the threshhold of one of the most active and fruitful eras of its history.

"Largely through research, over a long period of years, the steam railroads have been made into the most adequate, dependable, economical and safe means of transportation for the mass movement of goods and people to be found in this country.

Air-Conditioning.

"Never in the history of the rail carriers has there been such an eagerness and alertness on the part of railroad executives, scientists, engineers and other employes to apply any new procedure that will enable the railroads to make available more economical, efficient and safe transportation as exists today. These facts have found expression in the expenditure during the worst economic depression of our national history of something like $40,000,000 for the air-conditioning of passenger equipment since 1932.

"This is probably as large if not a larger amount than has been expended for all other air-conditioning in the same period. It also has been demonstrated by the large expenditures that have been made for new streamlined passenger trains, improved types of locomotives and freight car trains, as well as scores of other improvements that have been made by the roads despite the low tide of traffic.

"Railway managements have faith in the future. They know that the tide of business conditions that has existed for some years will gradually rise and they want to be prepared to handle the traffic when it develops."

Brokers' Loans Drop $14,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers, held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $930,000,000 for the week ending yesterday, a decrease of $14,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $638,000,000

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

All Groups of Stocks Advance in Accelerated Trading; Far East Tension Lessens.

New York, Feb. 27.—Heartened by the stoppage yesterday of the retreat in stock prices, the market bulls put a little pressure on the shorts. The result was a broad covering movement and in a trading day given over largely to professional operators, with a volume of 2,300,000 shares, a moderate gain over yesterday, prices worked higher all along the line. Leading stocks at their best made 2 to 4 point advances. The tone of the market continued to be more sober than it was before the break took place, and the tendency of traders was to watch for any further restrictive moves by the authorities. May wheat closed an eighth of a cent higher at 100⅜ cents a bushel.

Public utility and railroad stocks gave the market a well rounded tone. The steel group was the leader of the industrials, but motors and motor accessories were quite strong. Virtually every railroad issue, except some in receivership, rose a point or more. The broadest advance was made by Great Northern, New York Central, Delaware & Hudson, Southern, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Steel opened mor ethan a point higher and continued for more than another point on short covering. Bethlehem and Republic moved up 1 to 2 points and the low-priced issues once more turned active. Chemicals were led by a rise of 4 points on Allied Chemical, their affiliation with the steel stocks being well known. Coppers were pushed up 1 to 2 points. The resumption of dividends by Anaconda was a help, and that stock was the favorite.

Most metal groups were sharply higher. Nickel gained more than 2 points. St. Joseph Lead continued to rise and National Lead made another sensational spurt, bringing its two-day gain to 70 points. United States Smelting was indifferent to al lthe excitement.

Melting of the snows gave zest to the trading in mail orders and farm implements. Montgomery Ward made a new top in rising over a point. Case, Harvester and others climbed a rung or two. Motor accessories were stimulated by a three-point jump in Briggs Manufacturing. Motor Products, Houdaille, Hershey and Electric Auto Lite were other favorites. Chrysler and General Motors were buoyant.

Stock groups that moved at a slower pace than the leaders were the sugars, rubbers, oils, foods and tobaccos. The electrics and machines kept pace with the steels and outdistanced the utilities.

Treasury Financing.

The Government bond market took quietly the announcement that the Treasury would raise a large amount of cash next month. The statement also was well received in banks and Government bond dealer circles. The banks seemed almost unanimous in predicting that, if the securities to be offered were priced right, the issue would go over well. In view of the magnitude of the demands to be made upon the Treasury the $800,000,000 net addition to the debt was considered smaller than might have been the case.

Because there have been rumors that a large amount of securities would be put out for cash, with exchange privileges accorded both the $450,000,000 bills due March 16 and the $559,000,000 notes due in April, there was a feeling of some relief that only the April notes would receive rights, the $450,000,00 bills being met with cash received through the $1,250,000,00 securities which are being offered for cash.

Those banks which held March 16 Treasury bills were somewhat disappointed that no "rights" will accrue to them, but the chance that the Treasury would give any privileges to holders of the bills was slight at best. Only on one occasion in the last five years have maturing bills received any rights, and that was in February, 1932. When the bills which fall due next month were originally sold it was intimated rather plainly that they would be taken up out of income tax receipts or other cash when due.

Foreign exchanges were firmer with less tension over the situation in Japan, although yen failed to recover much. Francs were especially strong, probably on use of the new funds borrowed in London by the French treasury.

Many Rates.

Interest rates charged customers by banks hardened slightly in New York City last month, while they softened in other parts of the country. January as a rule brings a considerable flow of funds to New York, but this year apparently offsetting influences were at work. December, on the other hand, usually sees help from New York to other parts of the country, but last year rates here eased while those in cities elsewhere stiffened, contrary to the seasonal trend. Compared with a year ago, January rates were lower all round.

No Favors.

Apparently some members of the Stock Exchange have been "good fellows" in executing orders for other members temporarily absent from the trading crowd. The committee on quotations and commissions felt it necessary to remind members that commissions must be charged under all circumstances.

France.

Strength in the French franc accompanied the weekly statement of the Bank of France showing another rise in gold holdings and a drop in circulation. The next statement will show the usual monthly expansion in circulation, but gold losses for the time are over. What worries the market is the steps to be taken when the Treasury will need more funds to finance its deficit. Opinion now seems to be that no action on the gold standard is likely before the April elections.

Board-Room Sweepings.

Having restricted the field of bank investments, the banks more than ever will become financing agencies of the Treasury. The goal probably is elimination of all but Government bonds from bank portfolios . . . Anacondia moved up about 2 points on its dividend of 25 cents a share, the first since 1931. The market scarcely was surprised at the payment, unless it has become callous to well-circulated reports . . . A brokerage house is trying the experiment of charging a fee for its market letters and exacting a promise of secrecy (and immunity) in their use. The old idea was to distribute the letters free in the hope of drumming up commissions If the new idea should spread, some letter writers would be embarrassed . . . Add flippant remarks of the military apropos economic subjects: This takes us back to the horse and buggy days.—FDR, commander in chief. The air is full of dead cats.—Gen. Hugh Johnson.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

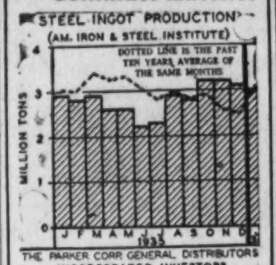
Steel Production Continues Advance



Boston, Mass., Feb. 27.—Steel production continues at a satisfactory rate in spite of the smaller demands from the automobile industry. Orders for railroad and structural steel have bolstered the production rate. It is estimated by the Iron Age that nearly one-quarter of the 1935 finished steel production went to the automobile industry and nearly 12 per cent for construction.

Big Producers Again Advance Price of Lead

Second Rise of $1 a Ton Announced Within Two Days.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 27.—Two major metal companies today increased the price of lead to 4.45 cents a pound. East St. Louis, from 4.40 cents a pound.

St. Joseph Lead Co. quoted lead at 4.45 cents a pound, East St. Louis and 4.65 cents a pound, New York, up .05 of a cent. American Smelting & Refining Co. issued its New York price at 4.60 cents a pound. This is the company's only official quotation, it was explained, and is the equivalent of 4.45 cents a pound, East St. Louis.

Both companies yesterday increased their New York and East St. Louis price basis .05 of a cent a pound, or $1 a ton.

This is the second price advance by a major producer in the last two days. American Smelting and St. Joseph Lead Co. yesterday raised their prices $1 a ton in New York and East St. Louis.

★ Everywhere the popularity of this fascinating instrument is growing by leaps and bounds! Two years ago you seldom saw one—now you see them everywhere in orchestras, bands, on the stage, at private parties, etc.—everywhere people gather. Why not learn to play yourself? It's very easy with our simplified method of instruction—average students play popular music after only 20 lessons! And best of all the cost is nominal—$1.50 weekly pays for both the accordion and the PRIVATE lessons. All you have to do is come in, make arrangements for the lessons, pay for a few weeks in advance and we give you the accordion (in case).

Harvested Crop Area 6,000 Acreas Greater

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Johnstown, Pa., Feb. 27.—The acreage of harvested crops in Cambria County was almost 6,000 acres greater in 1934 than in 1929, according to the 1935 Federal Farm Census preliminary report released by Director W. L. Austin, of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. The increases occurred largely in corn, wheat and potatoes.

A back-to-the-farm movement of considerable magnitude is indicated by an increase of 646, or 30 per cent in the number of farms between 1930 and 1935. Notwithstanding the increase in farms, the value of farm land and buildings declined about $3,500,000. The average value of land and buildings dropped from $66.67 to $43.89 per acre.

NYA Assailed As Extravagant By Mrs. Meyer

Mrs. Roosevelt Hears Her, but Both Say They Are 'Warm Friends.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt presided tonight at a meeting where Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Washington Post, criticized the National Youth Administration, but both insisted they were warm friends and shook hands to prove it.

"The fact that Mrs. Roosevelt came here knowing this was a debate shows what a good sport she is," Mrs. Meyer told the "Town Meeting of the Air," sponsored by the League for Political Education and the National Broadcasting Co. Every New York high school senior class sent representatives who were to report to their classmates tomorrow.

Mrs. Roosevelt called the participation of school representatives "a very important step" in dealing with the problems of youth. She expressed no opinion on the Administration's youth program. It was defended by Richard Brown, assistant director of the NYA, and John Lang, educational advisor to the WPA.

Mrs. Meyer is chairman of the Westchester, N. Y., county recreation commission, first of its kind in the country.

"If we do not soon get rid of the WPA, including the National Youth Administration, and turn back relief to local control and local administration, God help America," Mrs. Meyer said.

She criticized the NYA for extravagance, for "isolating youth from their families," inexperienced and inefficient leadership, and for ignoring the United States office of education.

"Who do you think has been selected to save the youth of Westchester at $3.000 a year?" she asked. "None other than Mr. Hopkins' sister, Mrs. Ada Hopkins Amie."

their approval of its purpose that supplemental estimates be forwarded by the Budget Bureau to Congress for consideration in connection with the pending District appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1937, embracing the difference in amounts between what the Commissioners recommended and the amounts approved by the Budget Bureau for the several municipal services concerned.

"It was suggested to this committee that it ask of the Budget Bureau an opportunity to appear before that bureau to presetn evidence in justification of the need of larger estimates of appropriations being submitted to Congress for the Health Department, the Tuberculosis Hospital, the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium, and the Gallinger Municipal Hospital than the Budget Bureau has already approved.

"The Commissioners would be pleased if you could find it convenient to grant this privilege to the committee, and thus afford it an opportunity as residents and taxpayers of the District of Columbia to present to your bureau the information which was laid before the Commissioners at yesterday's meeting."

McKellar Illness Halts Leave Bill

Further action on the Government leave bills was postponed until Monday by Chairman Bulow of the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday because Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, has a cold.

Bulow conferred with McKellar and Senator White (Republican), of Maine, the two other Senate managers on the measures, and then said he would try to arrange a conference with Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, and other House conferees for Monday morning.

House conferees are hopeful of effecting a compromise that will make the leave bills effective January 1, this year, and will permit Federal and District workers to accumulate more than the 60 days leave allowed in the Senate bills.

Complete Data On Investments Sought by SEC

Second Questionnaire Sent to Companies in Study Ordered by Congress.

One of the most exhaustive surveys ever made of financial organizations moved into another phase yesterday when the Securities and Exchange Commission released another questionnaire in connection with its study of investment trusts and investment companies.

Replies to this questionnaire must be made on or before May 15 of this year, it was noted, from organizations which had at any time total assets and deposited property of $500,000 or more. The period covered is from January 1, 1927, to December 31, 1935. If the company was organized subsequent to the former date, the questionnaire must be answered for the period of its existence.

The study, ordered by Congress, has sought through its exhaustively detailed questionnaires information which lays bare all details of the organization's history.

For instance, in the present questionnaire, information is required on the following points:

The history, and development of fixed and semifixed investment trusts, their structure, including securities issued, sold or distributed, and indentures and agreements relating to such securities; the nature, scope and extent of the trusts' activities; their investment policies, including contents of their portfolios and the volume of their transactions; and their depositor and trustee relationships.

The SEC prepared the questionnaire with the collaboration of a committee consisting of J. S. Myers, Distributors Group, Inc., B. F. Castle, of Ross Beason & Co.; J. M. Hencks, Calvin Bullock and H. I. Shaw, of Massachusetts Distributors, Inc. Other consultants were the investment trust committee of the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants and other representative independent accountants.

$1,164 More Given To Charity Ball

Check for $1,164, representing the net receipts from the President's birthday entertainment held in Harding Hall in the Government Printing Office last January 30, was turned over to Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday.

The check was presented by A. E. Giegengack, public printer, and Dr. George C. Havenner, chairman of the general committee in charge of the entertainment. Seventy per cent of the amount will go to Children's Hospital, and the remaining 30 per cent will be sent to the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, President Roosevelt's favorite endeavor on behalf of crippled children.

The check presented by Mr. Giegengack and Dr. Havenner brought the total so far received from the various entertainments and balls in the city on January 30, to $20,000 gross. Commissioner Allen, general chairman of the affairs, estimated the net amount derived was now in excess of $17,000, more than twice the amount raised last year.

Girl Who Slew Father Enters Insane Asylum

Supply, Okla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Emma Willis, 18-year-old farm girl who won acquittal in the slaying of her share-cropper father on an insanity plea, entered the Western Hospital for the Insane today.

She left Anadarko in a rather gay mood with a promise from her attorney, W. H. Cooper, that he would seek her release on a writ of habeas corpus "within two or three weeks."

The defense at the murder trial contended the girl had become mentally unbalanced as the result of cruelty and improper advances on the part of her 51-year-old father, Iddis H. Willis.

Cleric Held Guilty By Church Board

Chicago, Feb. 27 (AP).—The judicial commission of the Chicago Presbytery decided today that the Rev. J. Oliver Buswell, president of Wheaton College, was guilty of insubordination and conspiracy to undermine the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Buswell drew the lighest possible penalty, the commission admonishing him "to desist from this course." Members explained that the mild form of censure was chosen because the commission believed "that the accused, although clearly misguided, had acted sincerely and without conscious wrong."

Dr. Buswell announced he would appeal the decision to the Illinois Synod. He said if necessary he would carry the case to the judicial commission of the General Assembly, the highest court of the church.

The church fight began when Dr. Buswell, with Dr. J. Gresham Machem and Dr. H. McAllister Griffiths, both of Philadelphia, formed the independent missions board in protest against what they termed "modernistic" tendencies of the regular board. Ordered by the church assembly to resign from the new body, all refused.

Farm Bill at White House

anyone to determine between the purchasing power of the farmer, it come per person on a farm and the purchasing power of the net income of persons not on a farm, and the purchasing power is something wholly beyond the control of anyone by reason of any rule which is announced in the legislation. • • •

"We are here asked to confer upon him (Wallace) powers which would require omnipotence. It is manifestly on the face of it an absurdity.

"If you increase the income to the farmer, the income will increase the purchasing power of the farmer it will increase the selling power and capacity of the manufacturer, and the manufacturer thereby will be enabled to pay a great number of laborers at a greater wage. That is the only way. This idea that even by divine power you can go out and equalize the purchasing power of the producer and equalize the purchasing power of the laborer, when above them both is a power which is fixing a rule under which they live, is to me inconceivable."

To Keep "AAA."

Other developments yesterday on the farm front:

At the Agriculture Department it was said the new "soil conservation" set-up, will continue under the old "AAA" alphabetical designation.

Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, served notice on the Senate that he will move Monday to override the President's veto of the $50,000,000 feed and seed loan bill.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, introduced a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment giving Congress full power to regulate the sale and marketing of agricultural commodities. Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, previously had asked a constitutional amendment giving Congress supreme power over both agriculture and labor matters.

The House, by a 81 to 35 vote, rejected a move to salvage at least partially the New Deal tree "shelter belt" project by an $180,000 appropriation to continue studies and distribute nursery stock to farmers, as debate continued on the $161,000,000 Agriculture Department appropriation bill.

Neither taxes nor appropriations were provided in the $500,000,000 farm "soil conservation" bill given approval yesterday by House and Senate. The Senate included in its independent offices appropriation bill a $440,000,000 appropriation for the farm subsidies, and a reappropriation of $30,000,000 of unexpended AAA balance, but the House has not yet acted on this.

Virtually all of the old AAA official lists will continue at their present posts in administering the new program. But Farm Administrator Chester Davis said: "Except for the experience in the organization we have, and for a little more time, we are in an administrative way back where we were in 1933. We must start from scratch."

Cotton Farmers First.

Southern cotton farmers may be the first called in under the regional conference plan. Payments to cotton farmers may be based first on the acreage of land normally planted in soil conserving corps, and second on the value of cotton which would have been produced had the land not been diverted for soil conservation purposes.

The declared policy of the bill approved yesterday by Congress enumerates preservation and improvement of soil fertility, promotion of the economic use and conservation of land, diminution of exploitation and wasteful and unscientific use of national soil resources, and the protection of rivers and harbors against the results of soil erosion in aid of maintaining the navigability of waters and water courses and in aid of flood control. Also included in the policy is the McCormack "consumer's amendment," aimed at establishing the prewar ratio between the purchasing power of farm and non-farm net income.
